Italy Calls Ambassadors Home; Allies Are Gaining

FOUR OF THE PRINCIPALS IN "CARMEN" WEDNESDAY NIGHT

GERMANS CHECKED IN FLANDERS; CZAR ADVANCES IN EAST

Italy Calls Home Ambassadors from England, France, Germany and Austria—Important Move Pending

AUSTRO-GERMANS LOSE 20,000 IN UZSOK PASS

French and Belgians Recapture Het Sas, French Take Hartfans-Weilerkopf, British Advance Toward St. Juliens

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The German rush in Flanders has halted, at least for the moment. Today's official communications from the German, French, British and Belgian war departments, show this, but do not make it clear whether the allies have accomplished anything of importance further than to check the German advance.

The Berlin official announcement shows the Germans now are on the defensive along their new line north of Ypres, but says British attacks broke down with extraordinarily heavy losses.

The French and British reports claim part of the lost territory has been retaken. A dispatch from Field Marshal French says the British made progress near St. Julien and the French recaptured Het Sas.

The Paris announcement reports that the French have made further progress, recapturing Hartmans-Weilerkopf, which the Germans wrested from them two days ago.

The Italian ambassadors at Berlin, Vienna, Paris and London, have been summoned home for a conference, Rome interprets this as forecasting an important decision by Italy concerning her foreign policy.

Unofficial Geneva dispatches say the Russians have begun another attack in the Uzsok pass region. Austrian and German casualties in the last two days are estimated at 20,000.

Berlin Note Only Partially Confirms Claims of Allies

(By Associated Press.)

BERLIN, April 27.—(By Wireless Via London.)—The German war statement today says:

In the west: The British attacked in Flanders yesterday with very strong forces the new line of our positions north and northeast of Ypres, which runs from three to four kilometres south of the previous line from close to the north of Dechoudt farm, on the Yser canal, by way of St. Julien, in the direction of Grafenstafel.

These assaults, which partly were attacked in the rear by German artillery southeast of Ypres, completely broke down under our fire with extraordinarily heavy losses.

The enemy's fire completely demolished the houses in Lizerene which were vacated by us during the last night. The bridge head situated on the left bank of the canal immediately to the east of Lizerne still is being held by us.

"In the engagements hitherto fought at Ypres our troops took fifty machine guns.

"We have commenced to bombard the important railway junction and military headquarters at Poperinghe, about 12 kilometres west of Ypres, with appreciable success.

TRADE BALANCE SHOWS INCREASE OF $8,000,000

Cotton Exports for the Week Totalled More Than 139,000 Bales

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Reports placed before President Wilson by Secretary Redfield at today's cabinet meeting show the balance of trade in favor of the United States last week was $20,811,584, an increase of almost $8,000,000 over the previous week. Cotton exports for the week totalled 139,053 bales, making 7,140,510 bales since August 1.

WILLIAM A. SIMS NAMED MASONS' GRANDMASTER

BRITISH TRAWLER BLOWN UP IN THE NORTH SEA

Several Members of the Crew Are Reported Missing After Disaster to Vessel

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, April 27.—The Grimsby trawler Recolo has been blown up in the North sea. Some of the crew are missing.

Seven survivors, some of them terribly mutilated, were picked up out of a crew of nine. The engineer went down with the ship. One of the injured men died.

Opinion differs whether the Recolo was destroyed by a mine or a torpedo.

METHODISTS CONSIDER PENSIONING MINISTERS

Plans for Raising $10,000,000 for This Purpose Discussed in Chicago

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, April 27.—Plans to raise $10,000,000 to provide pensions for retired Methodist ministers, their widows and orphans, were outlined at a national convention of bishops and conference representatives of the Methodist Episcopal church which opened here today.

The pension plan includes establishment of a retiring annuity based on years of service and provision for such additional amounts as may be necessary in special cases.

The meeting is being attended not only by men prominent in Methodism, but by representatives of other denominations with pension schemes of their own. The denominations, it is said, are aiding each other in the movement.

NO RECEIVER IS NAMED FOR THE EMPIRE LIFE CO.

Tangled Litigation Ends When Commissioner Wright Is Given Jurisdiction

All of the tangled litigation begun against the Empire Life Insurance company of Atlanta July 8, 1914, ended Monday afternoon. No receiver has been appointed; all petitions for a receiver have been rescinded; Insurance Commissioner William A. Wright's jurisdiction under legislative acts has been declared paramount and exclusive; fees aggregating $12,500 have been allowed the many firms representing plaintiffs against the company.

The consent orders winding up the Empire Life litigation finally and completely were passed by Judge W. D. Ellis, of Fulton superior court, Monday afternoon; all parties involved agreed to these orders, and attorneys for these parties signed the orders.

By these orders, every vestige of the mass of litigation brought against the company since last July is completely wiped out of existence, with the one exception of the petition of Insurance Commissioner Wright for complete jurisdiction over the affairs of the company.

By these orders, the headquarters of the insurance company are declared to be in Atlanta, in the county of Fulton, and not in Augusta, in the county of Richmond.

ORDERS RESCINDED.

By these orders, Captain James W. English is removed as temporary receiver for the Augusta building of the company, and all other orders, rules, pending litigation, or anything else which may militate against the authority of Commissioner Wright are rescinded and discharged.

Under these orders, not a cent of the numerous disputed alleged claims against the company was ordered paid, but any persons claiming claims against the company has the right to sue in a court of law for affirmative relief. If a court then grants their claim, under the ruling Monday, the decree of the court will be submitted to Insurance Commissioner Wright, who is declared dominus

T. R.'S CORRESPONDENCE WITH PLATT IS BARED

Colonel Admits Consulting "Boss" About Vice Presidency Nomination

(By Associated Press.)

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 27.—A telegram in which former United States Senator Platt urged Colonel Roosevelt to sign a bill for exempting from the franchise tax grade crossings of steam railroads, and said that "our friends of the New York Central and Senator DePew were anxious," was read in the supreme court here on this, the sixth day Colonel Roosevelt has been on the witness stand in the $50,000 libel suit against him brought by William Barnes. In reply the colonel wrote Senator Platt he had received the telegram "too late."

These messages were part of additional correspondence that passed between Colonel Roosevelt and Platt, presented in court today.

William L. Barnum, the cross-examiner, started off his inquiry by asking Colonel Roosevelt whether he had taken Platt's advice in regard to the nomination for the vice presidency in 1900.

"Did you value Senator Platt's advice?" asked Mr. Barnum.

"I am unable to say," replied Colonel Roosevelt.

"You were entirely friendly with him then?"

"Oh, yes."

"Did he advise you to accept the nomination?"

"Don't say advise, sir," said Colonel Roosevelt.

"Well, as a result of your interviews with Boss Platt did he so advise you?"

QUESTION RULED OUT.

Colonel Roosevelt's counsel objected and the question was ruled out.

The following letter from Platt to Roosevelt dated February 5, 1900, then was read:

"I have hardly had time to give the consideration it deserves to your letter of February 1, and the matters involved therein, and am inclined to take more time for mature deliberation. The vice presidential question is a very important one, and a great deal depends upon it.

"Mrs. Platt's condition is considerably improved and it looks now as though I

STREET CAR COMPANY ASKS RAIL BOARD TO CONTROL THE JITNEYS

Petition Declares Jitney Buses Are Common Carriers and Subject to Regulation by the Railroad Commission

In a petition filed with the state railroad commission Tuesday afternoon, the Georgia Railway and Power company formally asks that the commission supervise, regulate and control the operation of jitney buses.

The power company avers that the jitneys are in every sense common carriers and therefore subject to control and regulation by the commission. It is contended by the company that the jitneys are now operating without control by any public body; that they do not furnish like and equal accommodations to all persons without distinction of race, color or previous condition as the law requires; that the transportation service furnished by them is inefficient, inadequate, unreasonable and without proper regard for the security and accommodation of the public riding in such as vehicles as passengers or being upon or otherwise using the streets, roads, highways and public places; that they are operated with great danger to both passengers and public; that they do not adhere to given routes and that they have no regard for the convenience or accommodation of the public.

UNFAIR COMPETITION.

The way in which the jitneys are operated is described in the power company's petition as unfair competition to the transportation service which it is required to furnish, because of the fact that its duties and obligations are prescribed for it and it is held to a strict supervision, regulation and control by public authority, while on the other hand the jitneys are alleged to be wholly unregulated and uncontrolled.

At the same time the power company's petition was filed with the railroad commission a similar petition was filed by citizens. This second petition, the company explained, was circulated by its representatives and the signers include both stockholders and non-stockholders in the power company.

The petition of the power company follows in full:

THE PETITION.

To the Honorable Railroad Commission of Georgia:

Your petitioner, Georgia Railway and Power company, respectfully shows:

1. That it is a street and suburban railway corporation under the laws of the state of Georgia; that it is a citizen, property owner, and large tax payer of the City of Atlanta and the state of Georgia; that it operates electric street railway passenger cars along and upon the streets and roads of the City of Atlanta and its suburbs, transporting passengers therein for hire; that it is subject to the jurisdiction of the railroad commission of Georgia, and that the railroad commission of Georgia has assumed and exercises general supervision over petitioner and its business as a

TALES OF HOFFMAN, AT MATINEE TODAY HAS A GREAT CAST

Martin Sings the Tenor Role for First Time Here—Lucrezia Bori, Anna Case and Rita Fornia in Cast

"Tales of Hoffman," the tuneful Offenbach opera revived and made famous again by Oscar Hammerstein a decade ago, was the offering at the matinee this afternoon at 2 o'clock, with an exceptionally fine cast. Riccardo Martin, the American tenor who has been an Atlanta favorite since the first season was the Hoffman, and his three loves were Anna Case, Rita Fornia and Lucrezia Bori. Raymonde Delaunois, the little Belgian contralto, was cast for the excellent part of Nicklaus, companion to Hoffman, and Didur, Ronpanion to Hoffman, and Didur, Rothier and de Segurola shared the three bass roles.

Atlanta heard "Hoffman" two seasons ago, with the same cast of principals except that Carl Jorn had the tenor role which Martin was given today. There is slight need to recall the dreamy beauty of the "Barcarolle," the sparkling airs of the sopranos or the noted "Diamond Song" which Rothier sang.

Miss Bori, the pretty Spanish soprano, arrived late Monday afternoon, delighted at greeting her southern friends again. She had the misfortune to injure her hand slightly when her automobile collided with another car—the same hand, by the way, she injured a short time ago in New York while on the stage. But the accident was slight, and will in no way interfere with her appearance this afternoon or Friday night when she sings in "The Love of Three Kings."

Miss Geraldine Farrar will arrive this afternoon and be the guest of Mrs. John E. Murphy at her Peachtree road home. She will sing for the first time tomorrow night, giving her new creation of "Carmen," with Martin as Don Jose and Clarence Whitehill as the toreador. Mme. Alda, who arrives tomorrow, will have the high soprano part of Micaela, which is given two of the loveliest arias in the opera.

Pasquale Amato, the baritone, who has sung so many fine roles here, arrived this afternoon from New York, with a smile as sunny as ever. He is to have the great role of Rigoletto on Thursday; will appear again Friday night, and will close the week as Napoleon in "Madame Sans-Gene."

Members of the opera company will be the guests tomorrow afternoon of the Atlanta Baseball association, and most of them will occupy boxes at the game. Richard Hageman, the Dutch conductor, de Segurola, and several others are ardent fans, and seldom miss a game on their Atlanta visits.

NO RECEIVER NAMED IN THE EMPIRE LIFE INSURANCE CO. CASE

litis, and he will pay under the court's decree.

Under the orders of Monday the following attorneys for plaintiffs will share the $12,500 fee allowed: Dorsey, Brewster, Howell & Heyman, Charles T. & Linton C. Hopkins and W. Carroll Latimer, attorneys for James R. Brown, a stockholder, who began the whole litigation by filing a petition for a receiver July 8, 1914, in Fulton superior court; William A. Wimbish and Austin & Smith, attorneys for A. J. Smith et al, another plaintiff; King & Spalding, attorneys for the Whitney company of New York, another plaintiff.

COMPANY'S ATTORNEYS.

For the company the attorneys are Little, Powell, Smith & Goldstein, F. A. Hooper, L. Z. Rosser and Jones & Chambers. Their fees are to be paid by Commissioner Wright out of assets of the company as soon as practicable. In addition to these lawyers, Attorney General Warren Grice, representing the state and the insurance commissioner, and Robert C. & Philip H. Alston, special counsel called in by Commissioner Wright, had much to do with the settlement of the case.

All actual court costs of the litigation of J. R. Brown et al. against the company are to be paid out of the assets of the company, it being pointed out that "the filing of the Brown bill before the insurance act of August 14, 1914, was approved, made the outcome of the litigation at least to some extent doubtful." No order as to the costs in the other cases was passed.

On July 8, 1914, James R. Brown, a stockholder of the Empire Life Insurance company, filed a petition in Fulton superior court asking for a receiver for the company. His attorneys were Dorsey, Brewster, Howell & Heymen. Several others intervened in the petition.

A petition in Fulton superior court by Earle F. Chandler, a stockholder, for a receiver, followed, filed by Attorney Madison Bell. Judge W. D. Ellis heard the J. R. Brown petition until the middle of August, and then dismissed the petition. The Chandler petition was then withdrawn.

On August 14, 1914, the legislative amendment to the 1912 insurance act, creating an insurance board of the governor, the attorney general and the insurance commissioner, which should have complete charge of insurance companies of Georgia, and which denied any court the right to appoint a receiver for an insurance company unless the insurance commissioner had refused to act as receiver against the orders of the board, was passed.

Under this act Brown and Chandler filed an application with the newly-created insurance board, making the same complaints made in the Fulton courts.

The board heard the case, had an insurance accountant go over the company's books and records, and found that the company was solvent and declined to recommend that the insurance commissioner take any action against the company, and ordered the complaint dismissed.

Nothing in the way of litigation then happened until January 8, 1915. On that day, conflicting orders were passed by the superior courts of Richmond and Fulton counties. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon, Judge Hammond, of Richmond superior court, appointed Commissioner Wright to take charge of the affairs of the company under a consent petition filed by him, reciting that the Brown petition was still pending in Fulton superior court, that parties were threatening to bring additional litigation and that, although the company was solvent, the threats of litigation were deterring policyholders and cutting down revenues, and so he asked for the company to be placed in his jurisdiction as insurance commissioner.

That night, J. R. Brown et al, through their attorneys, asked Judge W. D. Ellis, of Fulton superior court, for a receiver for the company. Judge Ellis granted a rule nisi, a hearing was held late in January which ended in February, at which time Judge Ellis refused to appoint a receiver but retained jurisdiction, refusing to dismiss J. R. Brown's petition, and set a further hearing for three weeks later.

Then A. J. Smith, a former salesman for the company, filed a salary claim and applied for a writ of prohibition through Austin & Smith, attorneys, to prevent the insurance commissioner from acting under Judge Hammond's orders, on the ground that the headquarters of the company were in Fulton county and not in Richmond, and hence Judge Hammond had no jurisdiction.

Attorney General Grice moved before Judge Pendleton that this writ of prohibition be denied and dissolved, and, when Judge Pendleton refused to dissolve it, this branch of the case was taken to the supreme court of Georgia, where it was pending until the litigation ended Monday.

Then Insurance Commissioner Wright filed in Fulton court an application similar to his application in Richmond court, and Judge Pendleton placed him in charge of the company's assets with restricted jurisdiction.

Next, Charles E. Whitney and other Augusta stockholders filed suit in Richmond county, alleging that the new Empire building there belonged to them and asking for a receiver. Shortly afterwards, the Whitney company, of New York, contractors, filed an application in Fulton county for a receiver to cover their alleged lien on the same building. Judge Ellis appointed Captain James W. English receiver for the building, and ordered him to go to Augusta and take charge and apply to Judge Hammond to relinquish jurisdiction there.

This Judge Hammond not only refused to do, but on April 2, held that Insurance Commissioner Wright was the only lawful receiver, enjoined the Whitney company from asking for another receiver, and refused the Augusta stockholders' request for their receiver.

Then intervening stockholders, represented by Colonel W. A. Wimbish, asked the Fulton courts to appoint an interim receiver to straighten out the tangle. Robert C. and Philip H. Alston were then called in as special counsel by Commissioner Wright, and ten days ago, a settlement was suggested, which was consummated when all the mass of litigation was wiped out by the two orders issued Monday afternoon.

LOSS OF APPETITE

Most Successfully Treated by Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Loss of appetite is accompanied by loss of vitality, which is serious.

It is common in the spring because at this time the blood is impure and impoverished and fails to give the digestive organs what is absolutely necessary for the proper performance of their functions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old reliable all-the-year-round medicine, is especially useful in the spring. Get it from your druggist today. By purifying and enriching the blood and giving vitality, vigor and tone, it is wonderfully successful in the treatment of loss of appetite and the other ailments prevalent at this time. It is not simply a spring medicine—it is much more than that—but it is the best spring medicine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the rich red blood the digestive organs need.—(Advt.)

Executive Secretary of Alumni Association Coming to Atlanta Friday

Vanderbilt university alumni are looking forward with interest to the luncheon next Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the Capital City club in honor of Charles Cason, executive secretary of the alumni association.

Mr. Cason will spend Friday here and the local alumni and former students of Vanderbilt have arranged the gathering at the Capital City club in his honor. Mr. Cason will tell the Atlanta, Georgia, alumni how they can lend most effective co-operation to a greater Vanderbilt.

Not only are local alumni invited to the luncheon but all Vanderbilt men who are in Atlanta on Friday will be welcome. The luncheon will be $1 per plate. All Vanderbilt men, who have not already done so, are requested to communicate with the treasurer, John Paschall, care of The Atlanta Journal, telephone, Main 566.

FOUR CITIES AFTER THE LIBERTY BELL

The mayors of New Orleans, Mobile and Montgomery have requested Mayor Woodward, of Atlanta, to join forces with them in urging Philadelphia to route the "Liberty Bell" over a certain southern road that will touch all four cities.

The Liberty Bell will soon start for the Panama Exposition on probably its last trip, and the mayors are very anxious that it pass through their respective cities.

Mayor Woodward states that he is ready to do everything in his power to have the bell brought this way.

Barrow and his daughter sued for injuries alleged to have been sustained by the daughter when a Seaboard train collided with a sightseeing bus in Jacksonville, Fla., January, 1914. Each brought suit against the railroad company for $25,000 damages.

POLICE BOARD MAY BE ASKED TO TAKE CONTROL

Committee Expected to Favor Taking Supreme Command from Chief

While no member of the committee of the police board, which is probing the police department, will consent to be quoted for publication, indications are that the principal result of the investigation will be a recommendation to the police board that the board assume control of the policies of the police department, instead of letting the chief of police exercise supreme command.

The committee held its third meeting Monday night and heard from Recorder George Johnson, Police Captain Poole, Police Probation Officer Coogler and B. B. Posey, of the juvenile court.

The meeting was held in executive session and the newspaper reporters were excluded.

Commissioner Clarke took a very strong stand against an open session, and Commissioner Sisson took a very strong stand in favor of an open session. Commissioners Vaughan, Wardlaw and Holland stood with Commissioner Clarke.

COOGLER HAS OWN SYSTEM.

In the course of the committee's talk with Probation Officer Coogler it developed he has a system of probation for certain cases which the committee knew nothing about and of which Recorder Johnson also was in ignorance.

This is what he calls Class B probation, and was worked out by him and Nash B. Broyles when the latter was recorder. It is used in cases where wives complain that their husbands are not supporting them. In such cases, if deemed advisable, the probation officer goes to the husband, persuades him to contribute a certain weekly amount to his wife's support, and this sum is paid to the probation officer and he turns it over to the wife. The husband, under this method of probation, is not brought before the recorder at all, provided he agrees to do better. Class A cases are brought before the recorder and put under a specified term of probation.

In reply to questions by the committee, Officer Coogler stated that his records show he has collected and disbursed, from Class A and Class B cases, a total of $19,953 in the last five years. He told the committee he was not under bond, and the committee indicated by its remarks that they thought he should be, both for his own and the city's protection.

Recorder Johnson, not knowing of the Class B probation arrangement between Officer Coogler and Recorder Broyles, has written the probation officer a letter asking him to submit a detailed report of his cases since November 1, when Recorder Johnson went in office.

WORK OF REPAVING SOUTH PRYOR IS BEGUN

Council Fight Delayed Improvement Months After Money Was Available

The county forces have commenced work on repaving South Pryor street with brick from Georgia avenue to Vasar street. The beginning of work on the project is of especial interest because of the long fight of council and the mayor, which delayed the project for months after the money was available.

The city authorities are preparing to push the street work now, and several assessment pavement jobs will soon be connected.

At the meeting of the street committee next Friday afternoon citizens from various sections of Atlanta will ask that their streets be oiled to keep down the dust.

TWO WOMEN RECOVERING FROM EFFECTS OF POISON

Mrs. W. M. Daniel and Mrs. May Benson Said to Have Tried Suicide

After taking poison Monday night in alleged attempts to end their lives, Mrs. W. M. Daniel, 169 Central avenue, and Mrs. May Benson, 178 South Pryor street, were reported to be well on the road to recovery at the Grady hospital Tuesday.

Mrs. Daniel was discovered by her young son lying across her bed, groaning. Grady physicians said she swallowed carbolic acid. Worry over financial matters is said to be the cause.

Mrs. Benson, despondent over recent troubles with her husband, it is said, took strychnine. She was carried to the Grady, where she denied having taken poison and resisted efforts to give her an antidote.

NEWS BOYS WILL BE GUESTS OF BILL SMITH

Fifty per cent of the box office receipts of the Strand motion picture theater on Tuesday will be given to the Universalist church, of which Rev. Fred A. Line is pastor. For the purpose of boosting the receipts and at the same time helping the newsboys, Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta baseball club, has bought fifty tickets and will take fifty newsboys to the show as his guests.

PENITENTIARY NINE DEFEATS STAR TEAM

An exciting ten-inning game between the Atlanta Stars and a picked team from the federal penitentiary, which the latter won by the score of 11 to 10, was the event of the half holiday enjoyed by the prisoners Monday. Other games and general use of the athletic field were enjoyed by the prisoners.

CONDUCTING OF POLACCO FEATURES "HUGUENOTS"

Atlanta Music Lovers Delighted With Masterful Performance Monday Night

The conducting of "The Huguenots" Monday night by Giorgio Polacco was remarked by many music lovers as one of the most masterful features of that truly splendid performance, and on Tuesday the conductor was receiving many congratulations both from Atlanta folk and members of the company.

The excellence of his work has gone far to recompense Atlanta for the unavoidable absence of Toscanini, who has conducted here a number of times, but who suffered from a nervous breakdown several weeks ago in New York and was ordered home to Italy for a long rest.

Signor Polacco was scheduled to conduct the first night and in "Rigoletto" while Toscanini was to direct "Carmen," "The Love of the Three Kings" and "Madame Sans Gene." In his absence Polacco probably will be at the desk at all performances except the two conducted by Richard Hageman, "Hoffman" and "The Magic Flute."

When Signor Polacco took charge of the Metropolitan direction several weeks ago "Musical America" paid him this tribute:

"The Metropolitan Opera company can not sufficiently be congratulated on having such a conductor as Giorgio Polacco at its service. Mr. Polacco ranks high among the most masterly operatic leaders of the time and no musician can fail to appreciate his great qualities. Unfortunately, his activities at the Metropolitan are far more circumscribed than his merits warrant and he has been constrained to expend his energies, for the most part, on such works as 'Pagliacci,' 'Cavalleria,' 'L'Oracolo,' 'Traviata,' and an occasional Puccini performance. So it comes that his splendid talents have not, perhaps, gained as much popular recognition as they unquestionably deserve.

"One of the consequences of Mr. Toscanini's illness this past week has been to bring his gifted colleague to the fore in all of the Italian works presented. On Thursday and Saturday evenings of last week Mr. Polacco took charge of the 'Trovartore' performances, and last Monday evening he presided over the last 'Iris' of the year. The opera moved as flawlessly in every detail as though the conductor had rehearsed it for weeks. Polacco is blessed with such spirit, temperamental fire, exquisite taste and musical resourcefulness as constitute the hallmark of greatest in a conductor and he got out of Mascagni's score as much as any one possibly could."

CORRESPONDENCE OF COLONEL AND PLATT PUT IN AS EVIDENCE

should be able to get to New York soon, at which time we can personally discuss the vice presidential and other questions."

"Did you discuss the question in pursuance of that letter?"

"I did."

In his reply to the letter, dated February 7, 1900, Colonel Roosevelt said: "Your very kind note has just been received. I note that you expect to be in New York on Saturday. If convenient I will call on you at the Fifth Avenue hotel at 3 p. m.

"I saw Kerns and told him I had written to you that I would not take the vice presidency, but that I wanted nothing said until I had a chance to talk matters over with you. I would a great deal rather be anything, say professor of history, than vice president."

DEPEW WAS ANXIOUS.

This telegram, dated May 7, 1900, from Senator Platt to Colonel Roosevelt, was read:

"Our friends of New York Central are very anxious to have you sign Senate bill 785, exempting from the franchise tax grade crossings of steam railroads. I hope you can consistently do so. Senator Depew is very anxious."

Colonel Roosevelt replied:

"I received your telegram and one from Ford yesterday. It was too late for me to act, as I had already published a memorandum stating not merely that Ford was against the bill but that the state tax commissioners opposed the bill.

"I did not receive your telegram until yesterday (Sunday). It was then altogether too late to get at the commission and again go over the matter. I am exceedingly sorry if any hardship has been caused either to the New York Central or the Long Island railroad, but it was a matter where I really had to act according to the advice of the commission, unless it could be shown they were in the wrong."

"Am greatly concerned because charter commission has arranged lunch for myself and O'Dell next Wednesday, this being one day they could get that would suit both. Do you really regard it as important for me to come. Can't Woodruff take my place? Does president really expect me?"

PLATT NOT "EASY BOSS."

Senator Platt replied:

"Think your absence from meeting of commission will be deplored by the president and the other governors. Meeting of charter commission seems to me should be secondary. Let them postpone."

Then Colonel Roosevelt telegraphed: "All right. In view of your second telegram I will come, but you are not an easy boss."

In a letter written from the vice president's chamber, Colonel Roosevelt said:

"If the chance comes along will you not keep my old friend, Mr. Joseph Murray, in mind?"

Senator Platt replied: "The one thing which you ask of me is one of the worst problems possible. Murray was removed from the office which he had filled for two or three years for inefficiency. He never went to Albany except to draw his pay. I did not imagine you would indorse a man so highly, who was not worthy. * * * I tell you this history of course in confidence, trusting that you will not use it."

NEARLY 1,000 MEMBERS ADDED TO THE CHURCHES

Protestant Lay Workers Enlist More in Month Than Revival Did

Results of the personal workers' efforts to gain members for the various Protestant denominations of Atlanta, are encouraging beyond the fondest hopes of the instigators of the movement. For the month of April more than 950 members have been received into churches.

So successful is the plan that when told of it, Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, the revivalist, who was at the Peachtree tabernacle in February and March, has written for statistics and declares he will advocate the plan wherever he holds a revival. He has called it the Atlanta plan.

This plan, as outlined in The Journal some weeks ago, is for lay workers in the churches to canvass thoroughly their neighborhoods, obtaining the names of all persons and their religious affiliations, if any. When persons are found without any religious affiliation, they are invited to attend the churches of their choice. These invitations are backed by the officers and pastors of the churches and are repeated twice weekly. Children who attend no Sunday school are encouraged to attend the ones of their choice also.

According to leaders of the movement, more persons have been received into the churches directly by this method in the few weeks it has been followed than during the whole time of the Chapman-Alexander meeting.

OTTO KAHN IS SORRY HE CAN'T COME TO ATLANTA

Chairman of Metropolitan Directors Telegraphs Regrets to Colonel Peel

While unable to come to Atlanta this spring, Otto H. Kahn, of New York, chairman of the board of directors of the Metropolitan Opera company, Monday telegraphed the Atlanta Music Festival association congratulating this city on its enterprise, wishing his friends here well, and expressing regret that he is not with them.

The telegram, which was read Monday night at the Capital City club dinner given by the directors of the Atlanta Music Festival association to the officers and directors and principals of the Metroplitan company, following the opera, was as follows:

Colonel W. L. Peel, President Atlanta Music Festival Association, Atlanta, Ga.:

To be in the last week of April, and not to be in Atlanta, is a sore and grievous disappointment. I should have loved to be with you.

First—In order to meet again my kind and valued friends in your beautiful city, and to enjoy their delightful hospitality; secondly, to hear the Metropolitan opera at its best, as it always is at Atlanta, because all of our artists are inspired to give their very best by the enthusiasm and warmth of appreciation of your public, and thirdly, because I was particularly desirous to pay tribute to the loyalty and the fine and plucky spirit of your committee and the subscribers to the opera fund, in determining, in the midst of the gloomy days of last winter, that, come what may, adversity or prosperity, Atlanta meant to have its opera season.

I rejoice that the apprehensions, which at that time seemed only too justified, have largely failed to materialize and that Atlanta and the south in general are once more getting ready to start forward on the route of the boundless economic development which is in store for them.

Please give my cordial greetings and sincerest good wishes to all those assembled at the Capital City club this evening, together with the assurance of my profoundest regret that imperative necessity keeps me away.

Some day this week those of us who had the privilege of being with you last year will assemble in New York and we shall drink a rousing toast to Atlanta and its people.

OTTO H. KAHN.

New York, April 26, 1915.

SPAIN URGED TO MAKE MOVE FOR GIBRALTAR

(By Associated Press.)

PARIS, April 27.—Public men of Spain are discussing the possibility of that country realizing its territorial aspirations in view of the probable reconstruction of Europe after the war. Senator Azcarate, first vice president of the chamber of deputies, in an address which has aroused wide comment, declared his country should take advantage of the present opportunity to complete the integrity of its territory by obtaining the cession of Gibraltar from England.

"We could exchange Ceuta (a seaport town in Morocco, seventeen miles southeast of Gibraltar) for Gibraltar," Senor Azcarate said, "and in that way England would continue to dominate the straits, the form of Gibraltar would be removed from our flesh and the bond of friendship binding us to England would be made closer."

The Atlanta Operas, Their Stories and Music

"CARMEN"

Wednesday Evening. BY NANA TUCKER

WHEN CARMEN was first produced at the Opera Comique in 1875, the reception accorded it is said to have hastened the composer Bizet's death—the elemental passion of it was too much even for the Parisians.

And too, the trace of the influence of Wagner, recognizable in the instrumentation of the score, made it especially unwelcome to the French critics. The use of guiding themes to announce and accompany the different characters, and the importance given the orchestra, makes the only resemblance, however, which the opera Carmen bears to a Wagnerian score. For most of the music is in a light vein, peculiarly Spanish in color, with Gypsy rhythms, and forceful, catchy melodies which appeal more to the popular ear. That is has become one of the most popular of modern French operas may be attributable to its highly dramatic plot and the picturesque scenes it affords, being furnished with music so appropriate it explains itself, and creates the very atmosphere of the scenes it portrays; making an opera easy to be understood without libretto or analytical notes.

THE CAST.

|---|---|
| Carmen | Geraldine Farrar |
| Micaela | Frances Alda |
| Frasquita | Lenora Sparkes |
| Mercedes | Sophie Braslau |
| Don Jose | Riccardo Martin |
| Escamillo | Clarence Whitehill |
| Dancaire | Robert Leonhardt |
| Remendado | Angelo Bada |
| Zuniga | Leon Rothier |
| Morales | Riccardo Tegani |

The short, restless overture—a brilliant and exciting introduction to this play of gypsies, smugglers, cigar girls, dragoons and bull fighters—gives out at its close the foreboding minor motif to be heard throughout the opera whenever Carmen appears.

The rising curtain reveals a plaza in Seville, gay with an animated throng in lively chorus. On the left is to be seen the quarters of the military guard; to the right is a cigar maanufactory; and in the background are steps leading to a bridge.

STIRRING MILITARY SCENE IN FIRST ACT.

It is noon.

At the entrance of a timid young peasant girl, Micaela, who comes bearing a message for the Brigadier Don Jose, the chorus is interrupted long enough for one of the officers, Morales (tenor), to inform her that Don Jose is with the relief guards soon to arrive. Micaela, who has the high soprano role of the opera, is the maiden Jose has left behind in his native village. As she departs the chorus is resumed.

The fifes and drums of approaching soldiers are heard now. Figures are formed, the sentries exchanged, and the first guard goes off duty to the strains of inspiring martial music. The young brigadier, Don Jose (the leading tenor role), and a superior officer, Zuniga (baritone), are conversing together when the factory bell rings, and the crowd gathers in anticipation of seeing the pretty cigar makers.

Don Jose, who loves Micaela and is therefore indifferent to every one else, sits near the guard house mending a chain for his sword, while the others join in a welcoming chorus. As the girls emerge from the factory, smoking little cigarettes and singing a humorous refrain suggestive of the effect of nicotine, the young men all inquire for their favorite. Carmencita, the reckless, fascinating little gypsy who captivates all hearts.

The orchestra several times repeats the baleful Carmen theme; and with this Carmen herslf rushs upon the scene, dazzling with her beauty and coquetry, while she sings her song, "Love Is Like a Wood-Bird Wild," to the rhythm of an old Moorish dance known as the "Habanera." This quaint chromatic melody, written within the compass of one octave, is suggestive of the sighing wind, with its soft accompaniment of the violins.

Perceiving that Don Jose takes no heed of her or her song Carmen coquettishly flings a rose at him as he runs off the stage, her companions following.

BEAUTIFUL DUET FOR SOPRANO AND TENOR.

The gentle Micaela now returns, and in an exquisite aria with harp accompaniment, delivers a letter she bears from Jose's mother. A tender and touching duet follows, and as Micaela leaves him his song is "peaceful as the church bells of his home." Praying that if ever evil comes to him his mother may protect him, Jose takes from his coat the rose Carmen had flung to him and is about to throw it away, when a sudden disturbance is heard in the factory. Girls rush out screaming to Zuniga that in a quarrel Carmen has stabbed a companion.

Amid a scene of excitement Jose is sent to bring the offender, and when she confronts Zuniga her impertinence so angers him, he orders Jose to fetter her hands and guard her while he goes to make out an order for her arrest.

Carmen now exerting all her powers of coquetry to beguile Jose into effecting her escape, dances a rapturous Seguidilla— Spanish dance with sinuous swaying motions—improvising her own words about a happy meeting place she knows on the rampart of Seville, and so bewitching the young brigadier that he consents to aid her. When the officers return and she is being led away to prison, Jose contrives to fall, and in the confusion Carmen throws the rope from her hands and escapes over the bridge, singing gay snatches of the "Habanera," while Jose for his neglect of duty is sentenced to prison for a month.

Each act is prefaced by an orchestral introduction presenting in tone and character of two scenes to follow. Among the themes now heard is Don Jose's love-song, and the stirring strain to be recognized later on as the song of the Toreador, followed by weird Moorish dance music suggestive of tambourines and castanets. And the curtain rises for the second act.

It is evening, a month later, at the cabaret of Lillas Pastia, near the ramparts of Seville.

Carmen has returned to her wandering gypsy life. Two gypsy girls, Frasquita and Mercedes, friends of Carmen, are entertaining some soldiers with their dancing and singing; Carmen herself leading them in her lively "Gypsy song" while ignoring the attentions of Zuniga, who has followed her here.

THE ENTRANCE OF THE TOREADOR.

Shouts and loud acclamations now herald the approach of the Toreador, Escamillo (baritone), the champion bull fighter of Granada. He enters with his cousing song, and immediately falls in love with Carmen, but is gally and summarily dismissed. Now two smugglers arrive in search of Carmen to aid them in their enterprise. Here takes place a most effective quintette which is sung so softly it is but a half whispered chatter between the bandits and gypsies. Carmen at first refuses to go with them, giving as her reason her growing love for the young brigadier who aided in her escape, and himself suffered imprisonment for her sake, and whom she is even now awaiting. At this moment a gay barrack call is heard in the distance. Quickly persuading her to use her powers to induce him to join their band, all hurry out as Dan Jose enters.

A long and impassioned love scene follows, affording a most dramatic duet; Carmen's dance music; and Jose's fine aria, a melody of direct and unadorned beauty.

Hearing the call of the bugle summoning him to his regiment, he hesitates between duty and love, then yields to Carmen's coaxing, deserts the army, and goes with her to lead the free life of a bandit. But not before he has a quarrel with Zuniga who, being also infatuated with Carmen, is so angered at finding his subordinate a successful rival he orders him away, and Carmen, seeing a fight imminent, bids the smugglers seize Zuniga while she and Jose escape to the mountains.

IN THE CAMP OF THE SMUGGLERS.

After the next entr'acte, a wild mountain ravine shows the picturesque retreat of the smugglers. It is night. The gypsies grouped about the rocks sing a chorus in praise of their mode of life, while smugglers ascend the peak with heavy bales on their backs. Jose stands on a promontory looking to the valley below, and upon inquiry it is learned is thinking of his mother and of what she must think of him. The capricious Carmen already weary of his abject infatuation shows plainly her indifference to him, as she moodily watches Frasquita and Mercedes telling their fortunes with cards. She joins them in the game, the three singing a little terzetto with light staccato accompaniment. And when Carmen's hand unluckily foretells death for herself and her lover, she sings her effective "Card Song."

The chief smugglers now return and report some one intercepting the pass. Leaving Jose alone as guard, they hasten off for their work, singing the smugglers' chorus. At this moment Micaela appears timidly in the pass. With a guide she has found her way here to entreat Jose's return—his mother is dying. Pausing to regain control, and imploring the protection of Heaven, she sings her beautiful aria, "I am not Faint-Hearted," which is considered the finest soprano number in the whole opera. Ere her presence is made known Escamillo appears and Micaela hides in fright. Escamillo undauted by Jose's warning shot, draws nearer and insolently inquires for Carmen.

Now the contrabandistas return laden with their spoils, and when the fickle Carmen welcomes Escamillo and receives his declarations, the jealousy of Jose is so aroused a fight ensues; but with the intervention of Carmen the rivals are separated and Escamillo, inviting them all to the bull fight on the morrow, nonchalantly departs.

Micaela now discovered, rushes to Jose for protection, and with the tidings of his mother finally prevails on him to accompany her.

Before he leaves he has a stormy scene with Carmen, in which she spurns him and bids him go with Micaela. At this moment the taunting song of the Toreador is heard in the distance. And Jose beside himself with jealous rage, threatens vengeance upon his return. Carmen recalls her fortune as foretold in the cards, and shudders with dread as Jose moving slowly down the pass, calls back to "remember."

THE DEATH OF CARMEN

With music full of irregular rhythms and discord and noises, the final act is introduced. The scene is at the entrance to the arena where the bull-fight is to take place, and opens with a hurly-burly chorus of venders advertising their wares. A fanfare of trumpets announces the combatants, and with pomp and acclamation Escamillo is escorted in with Carmen on his arm; the chorus joining in the refrain of the Toreador Song in his honor. Before Escamillo takes leave of Carmen to enter the ring they have a love-duet, "If You Love Me." Now Carmen left alone outside, waits to observe the crowd surging in to the strains of circus march, notwithstanding the warning she had that Don Jose is lurking near.

Suddenly Jose appears, dejected, and broken-hearted, and abject in his entreaties for Carmen to return to him, to go and begin a new life. Carmen confesses she no longer loves him, but another.

The music in the orchestra is now breathlessly exciting, and over all is heard the terrible revenge motif given out by the oboe. Shouts of applause issue from the amphitheater, and Carmen makes several vain attempts to get past Jose to the entrance. In a frenzy of anguish the rejected lover pleads for the last time. Again Carmen disdains him, and throws at him the ring he had given her. Now the triumphant Toreador's song is heard within the arena announcing Escamillo's victory, and as Carmen rushes toward the steps, Jose draws his poinard and stabs her. With his agonized cries as he realizes what he has done, the curtain does down.

WILSON NOT FORECASTING JAP-CHINESE ARGUMENT

President Says He Doesn't Know What Dispatches from Peking May Signify

WASHINGTON, April 27.—President Wilson said today he knew of no further developments in the Japanese-Chinese negotiations. That Japan was pressing hard for acceptance of her demands, the president pointed out, had been indicated ever since the negotiations began. He did not know what the latest aspect, as reported in Peking news dispatches, hight turn out to signify.

President Wilson said no reply would be made to the cablegram from American missionaries in China concerning the Japanese demands. The communication, he said, had been intended for the information of the American government and did not appear to call for a reply.

YOUNG WOMAN AND HER BROTHER ARE DROWNED

WAYCROSS, Ga., April 27.—Mrs. Victoria Pace Jowers, aged twenty, and her small brother, Leroy Pace, aged five, were drowned in the Satillo river, three miles northeast of this city Monday.

They were members of a picnic party, which had elected to spend the Confederate Memorial day holiday fishing. The bodies were recovered.

night attack northeast of Vienne-le-Chateau was repulsed.

"In the Meuse hills we also secured further advantages yesterday. Although the French brought up new forces, the attacks made by the enemy against our positions at Combres failed.

"A large attack in the forest of Ailly was repulsed by us with heavy losses to the enemy. Further east of this district the enemy gained no new ground.

"Nocturnal hand to hand fighting we also worked our way successfully in Le Pretre wood."

"The enemy repeatedly attacked last night our positions on Hartmans-Weilerkorf. All his attacks failed.

"In the eastern theater the situation remain uncheanged."

Austro-Germans Lose 20,000 In Two Days at Uzsok

(By Associated Press.)

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 27.—(Via Paris.)—The Russians have begun another strong offensive at Uzsok pass, in the Carpathians, according to a Tribune dispatch. The Austro-German casualties in that region in the last two days, the dispatch says, numbered 20,000.

Melting snow has hindered the Russian advance between Stry and Matmaros.

Italy Calls in Ambassadors From Belligerent Nations

(By Associated Press.)

ROME, Italy, April 27.—(Via Paris.)—The Italian ambassadors at Paris, London, Vienna and Berlin have been summoned to Rome to confer with Foreign Minister Sonnino.

In Rome this action is regarded as preliminary to the announcement of a grave and important decision by the Italian government.

Signor Tittoni, the ambassador to France, reached Rome this morning. He left this city only a fortnight ago for Paris.

Marchese Carlotti, the ambassador to Russia, will not come back, because of the distance and the difficulties of travel, but a messenger has been sent him with instructions.

General French Tells of The Allies' New Advance

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, April 27.—The following report from Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British forces at the front, under today's date, was given out here today:

"Yesterday all German attacks northeast of Ypres were repulsed. In the afternoon our troops took the offensive and made progress near St. Julien and to the west of that place.

"The French co-operated on our left, and further to the north they re-took Het Sas.

"In the course of yesterday's fighting our artillery took full advantage of several opportunities for inflicting severe casualties on the enemy.

"On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report. In addition to the destruction of Courtral Junction, mentioned in the communique last night, our airmen yesterday bombarded successfully stations and junctions at the following places: Tourcoing, Roubaix, Ingelmunster, Staden, Langemarck, Thielt and Roulers."

French Recapture Lizerne, Repulse All German Attacks

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, April 27.—The following Belgian official report, dated April 26, was given out in London today:

"Last night our infantry repelled three attacks made south of Dixmude by the Germans, who again are using asphyxiating gases. The Germans sustained heavy losses.

"Today, along our front the artillery of the enemy has shown a certain amount of activity. Our artillery replied with success and by a strong fire proved of useful help to the French. These troops made and attack on Lizerne, which yesterday fell into the hands of the enemy, but which was wrested from them again this afternoon."

French Advance on Meuse And to North of Ypres

(By Associated Press.)

PARIS, April 27.—The official statement given out today by the French war office read:

"There is nothing to add to our communique of last night except that we consolidated our positions and continue to make progress to the north of Ypres (Belgium) and also on the heights of the Meuse."

"The summit of Hartmans-Wilerkorf, which was taken from us yesterday morning, was recaptured by our troops the evening of the same day. We also took some prisoners."

STREET CAR COMPANY ASKS RAIL BOARD TO CONTROL THE JITNEYS

common carrier of passengers for hire, and that all the powers of the railroad commission have been and are being exercised in accordance with the laws of this state upon and over petitioner and its business.

2. Petitioner shows that there are now being operated upon, along and over the streets, roads, and other public places in the city of Atlanta and its suburbs, and in the county of Fulton and in the county of DeKalb by the persons, firms, and corporations hereinafter named public conveyances in shape of automobiles or motor cars, and commonly known as "Jitney Busses," transporting passengers for hire and affording a means of street transportation in the city of Atlanta and its suburbs similar to that ordinarily afforded by street railways, but not operated upon fixed tracks, and indiscriminately accepting and discharging such persons as may offer themselves for transportation along the way; that such business of furnishing a means of public conveyance of passengers for hire has been pursued by the parties named constantly or continuously for a definite period of time, and for distances of from two to three miles in length; that the persons, firms or corporations so operating the said public conveyance of passengers for hire upon and along the streets, roads and public places of the city of Atlanta and its suburbs are the following, namely:

JITNEY BUS COMPANY.

"The Jitney Bus company, W. E. Austin, Jr., J. F. Hazelton, H. J. Dimond, W. F. West, J. A. Allen, J. S. Walton, O. S. Anderson and C. L. Whitehead, under the firm name of Anderson & Whitehead. John E. Rivers, G. H. Williams, E. M. Price, Harry O. Dean, A. J. Holbrook and W. F. Foss, A. A. T. Elliot, A. B. Thompson, Clifford Viters, Dr. J. C. Wright, M. Klausman and H. F. Schlesinger, M. R. Semple, W. H. Hardin, John F. Pate, W. E. Hughes, P. R. Gailnard, R. F. Campbell, George W. Whie, W. A. Royal H. M. Mauck, A. D. Loyd, N. D. Hayes, George Duke, J. H. Hand, J. A. McLaughlin, Atlanta Auto Service company, A. L. Satterwhite, Holder & Manning, R. E. Pettis, J. J. Gwinn ,King Stillman, John Ciprano, R. J. Williams, as well as other persons whose names are not known to petitioner.

3. That the business pursued by each of the parties named is that of a common carrier of passengers for hire, and as such the railroad commission of Georgia under the laws of the state of Georgia has general supervision over such persons, firms and corporations in the said business of a common carrier so conducted by each of each.

4. Petitioner further shows that the said business as now being conducted by the persons above named and others is being done without any supervision, regulation or control by any public authority whatever or by anybody or person in the interest of the public; that the service and facilities furnished by such persons, firms and corporations as such common carriers are not reasonable, sufficient, proper or adequate; that the schedules maintained, or pretended to be maintained by such persons, firms and corporations are not sufficient, nor adequate, nor dependable; that the routes upon which said persons pretend to furnish such service are not adhered to, but the service is withdrawn therefrom at the will or whim of the operators of such cars; that the cars operated in the said service are not run with proper regard for the accommodation or security of the public; that the said automobiles or motor buses transport passengers on the running boards, fenders, and in positions of extreme risk of danger to such passengers; that the said cars are operated in such a manner and at such rates of speed as to cause great danger to the public riding in the cars or upon the highways over which such cars are operated.

5. That the companies or corporations above named pursuing such business of common carrier as aforesaid, have issued stocks and securities without first obtaining the approval of the railroad commission of Georgia to such issues, and contrary to the laws of this state.

6. That the said persons, firms and corporations do not comply with the provisions of law applicable to the said business of common carrier, or with reference to the operation of motor vehicles or public conveyances along the public streets, roads and highways.

7. That the said persons, firms and corporations pursuing the business of common carrier for hire as aforesaid do not furnish like and equal accommodations to all persons without distinction of race, color, or previous condition as required by law.

8. Petitioner further shows that the business of a common carrier of passengers for hire pursued by the said persons, firms and corporations is similar to the business pursued by this petitioner; that the said persons enjoy all of the benefits and advantages of a common carrier of passengers for hire that petitioner enjoys without performing or bearing the duties and obligations of such business, such as are performed and borne by petitioner; that the competition so attempted to be brought about by the said persons, firms and corporations with petitioner in the business of transporting passengers for hire on the streets and roads of the city of Atlanta and its suburbs is a species of unfair competition in that petitioner is compelled to perform the duties and obligations of such business and the said persons, firms and corporations are not compelled to perform such duties and obligations, and in that petitioner and its business are held to strict supervision, regulation and control by public authority, and the business of said persons, firms and corporations is not supervised, but is wholly unregulated and uncontrolled.

GENERAL SUPERVISION.

Wherefore, Petitioner respectfully prays that this honorable commission exercise the power and authority conferred upon it by law with respect to said common carriers; that it exercise general supervision over said persons, firms and corporations, and all others engaged in such business, and that it supervise, regulate and control said persons, firms and corportaion and all others engaged in the said business of common carriers as aforesaid in such manner as may be deemed appropriate to such business and in a manner corresponding to the supervision regulation and control exercised by this honorable commission over petitioner and its business of a common carrier of passengers for hire in the city of Atlanta and its suburbs.

The petition is signed by the president of the Georgia Railway and Power company.

To the People of Fulton County:

There are 491 lawyers at the Atlanta Bar, by actual count, whose names are printed in the Fulton County Daily Report. Doubtless there are many others whose names are not so printed. Less than 200 of these have signed a statement indorsing Mr. Jeffries for Ordinary. The bar was thoroughly canvassed to obtain these signatures. I know this because the canvassers came to my office and requested me to sign it. I made no effort to get an indorsement of this kind from the Atlanta Bar. I do not criticise Mr. Jeffries for doing so but do not believe in that method of running a race for a judicial office. I have never done it, and never will. The relations between Mr. Jeffries and the Atlanta Bar are very close, as he has charge of that part of the court which organizes the juries. He probably knows personally more than half the jurors who come into the court for the administration of justice. I do not say that this explains the fact that he was able, after a diligent canvass, to obtain these signatures, for I know that some, whose names are signed to this indorsement would not be consciously influenced by such consideration. But I simply state the facts, over my own signature, and ask the public to judge.

I believe the bar generally recognize the fact that a lawyer ought to be the judge of this important court. Many of those whose names are signed to this indorsement have so stated. I fell in with the Supreme Court Judge this morning on the street car, who expressed surprise that so many of the lawyers had indorsed Mr. Jeffries, who is not a lawyer and has had no legal training. This eminent Judge said to me, of his own volition, that the Ordinary of Fulton County ought to be a lawyer, and a good one. He further said, voluntarily, that the office of Ordinary in this county was one of more importance to the widows and orphans of this county than that of a judge of the Superior Court.

I submit to the people of this City and County, that this effort of Mr. Jeffries, to make it appear in a flaming advertisement, that the bar of Atlanta is against me, is unjust to me, and unworthy of him. After I am elected by the people, as I will be, he will still hold his office of deputy clerk, in charge of the jury lists, and he ought to keep aloof from entangling alliances that will tempt him to favoritism. He is a gentleman, but this strenuous effort on his part to obtain signatures of Atlanta lawyers, indorsing him for this important judicial office, and then spread it before the public in half page display advertisement, on the eve of the election, is unfair, and I denounce it and appeal to the people. I refuse, and have refused, to seek to divide the bar in the effort to be elected to an important judicial office. Any effort to do this is unworthy and unfair, and I believe the people will rebuke it at the polls.

I regret the necessity for this kind of a statement, but feel that I am justified in making it.

This mattress is filled with pure, white felted staple cotton—fifty pounds of it—and is covered with either sateen or art ticking.

To sell it at $15.00 is a triumph, inasmuch as that is the price of many branded mattresses that are filled with half linters and half felted cotton.

THE BABY'S WELFARE A MOTHER'S DREAD

A fear clutches at the heart of the mother that her own little one may not live long. She dreads its second summer, or that it may never wake from its sound sleep. All mankind loves a mother—loves to see a mother love her child. A baby and its mother are insured against ill-health if the mother takes Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a tonic for women that Dr. R. V. Pierce invented nearly a half century ago for women's ills. This is a vegetable tonic, made only of the chicinal roots with glycerine, which puts the female system into perfect, healthy action. Before baby's coming it is just the tonic that puts the womanly system into a proper condition to make the birth painless and to insure a healthy child.

Many mothers of families in the United States have reason to be grateful to the person who recommended Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is put up for the single purpose of curing disease peculiar to women. It has sold more largely on this continent than any other medicine for women. Another point in its favor: it is a temperance remedy and does not contain a single drop of alcohol nor of any narcotic.

Young mothers who preserve the charms of face and figure in spite of an increasing family and the care of growing children are always to be envied. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription gives the strength and health upon which happy motherhood depends. It practically does away with the pains of maternity. It enables the mother to nourish the infant life depending on her, and enjoy the hourly happiness of watching the development of a perfectly healthy child.

CALOMEL DYNAMITES A SLUGGISH LIVER

Crashes into sour bile, making you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.—(Advt.)

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Here's Grandmother's Recipe to Darken and Beautify Faded Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.—(Advt.)

A New, Harmless Way to Banish Hair Growths

(Beauty Topics.)

By following this suggestion any woman can, in the privacy of her own home, remove every trace of hair or fuzz from her face. With powdered delatone and water mix enough paste to cover the not wanted hairs; apply and in two or three minutes rub off and wash the skin. This method is unfailing, harmless and quick in results, but care should be employed to get the genuine delatone.—(Advt.)

Sold His Farm For More Than He Expected

"My farm is situated in Lee Co. I placed it on the market at a fair price, but could not get a single prospect. Your representative persuaded me to improve the place by painting, with the result that I soon sold my farm without any trouble for several thousand dollars more than I expected to get. # DIXIE HIGHWAY BOARD INQUIRES ABOUT ROUTES

Information Desired From Various Counties Announced in Resolution

The Dixie highway commission, which is to locate the route of the highway between Chicago and Miami, at its recent meeting in Louisville adopted resolutions setting forth the information it desires from counties bidding for the route.

These resolutions follow:

"Resolved, That the secretary be directed to proceed at once by circular letters and through the press to inform the advocates of the various routes that the directors desire at the very earliest moment information on the following subjects:

"Mileage in each county under the proposed route.

"Condition of this road and mileage classified as (a) highly improved with hard surface; (b) gravel, macadam or chert; (c) natural without hard surface; (d) grades and drainage.

"Number and character of bridges classified as (a) concrete; (b) steel; (c) wood; (d) free or toll.

"Streams without bridges and condition of fords.

"What arrangements have been made for putting these roads in first-class condition and maintaining them; character of road to be built; full particulars.

"What guarantee will be furnished that road will be built and maintained as represented.

"At what date can road be ready for dedication.

"Population to be served, tributaries and feeders, historical attractions and such other data as advocates may wish to submit.

"That the persons delegated by various county authorities to furnish this information be requested to furnish each member of this organization a copy of the same on or before May 10, 1915.

"That when this meeting adjourns it adjourns to meet in Chattanooga on May 20, 1915.

"That at meeting of May 20 the directors hear from such representatives of various routes as have furnished the information herein requested."

COMMISSION MEMBERS.

The names and addresses of the members of the commission are as follows:

Richard J. Finnegan, The Journal, Chicago; W. W. Marr, Springfield, Ill.; Carl G. Fisher, Indianapolis, Ind.; Thomas Taggart, French Lick, Ind.; Harry L. Gordon, George W. Harris, Cincinnati; Claude B. Mercer, Hardinsburg, Ky.; H. B. Hanger, Richmond, Ky.; A. M. Shook, Nashville, Tenn.; M. M. Allison, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Clark Howell, Atlanta; W. T. Anderson, Macon; G. W. Saxon, Tallahassee, Fla.; S. A. Belcher, Miami, Fla.

In pursuance of the request contained in the above resolution, the counties bidding for the route are now taking steps to prepare the information desired by the commission and to make the guarantees considered necessary to secure the route.

The chamber of commerce of Rome, Ga., through its president, T. E. Grafton, has taken the lead in support of the Rome route from Chattanooga to Atlanta, and has appointed a committee representing Walker, Chattooga and Floyd counties.

Below Atlanta, a number of different routes are contesting for the highway. One of these routes, touching Forsyth, Barnesville, Griffin, Hampton and Jonesboro, has already perfected organization representing the counties of Pike, Monroe, Spalding, Henry and Clayton, and will make a strong bid for the highway.

WOMEN ARE HALTED ON WAY TO PEACE MEETING

Miss Katherine Glover Among 39 Americans on Ship Detained by England

Miss Katherine Glover, former editor of woman's department of The Atlanta Jurnal and for several years editor of Today's magazine, is in London with 39 other American women, delegates to the Hague Peace conference, and the British government will not allow them to proceed further.

Associated Press dispatches Monday stated their steamer, the Noordam, is anchored in the Downs unable to obtain permission to proceed to Rotterdam, that Jane Addams, leader of the party, has appealed to Ambassador Page for aid; but that the ambassador explained to her all shipping to Dutch ports has been stopped and it is impossible for the embassy to help them.

This news of Miss Glover will be of great interest to her many Atlanta friends. One of them, Miss Rosa Kingsbury, stated Tuesday that she received a card from Miss Glover written on board ship stating she sailed on April 13, but had had no further word from her until informed by The Journal of the Associated Press dispatch.

Miss Glover, she said, had resigned her position as editor of Today's to make the trip to the Hague as delegate, but expected to contribute several war articles to this magazine.

TO DISCUSS MARKET CONDITIONS IN SOUTH

Delegates from Georgia and South Carolina Meet in Augusta May 15

For the purpose of discussing market conditions in the south, with special reference to stock raising and diversification of crops, delegates from twelve Georgia counties and twelve South Carolina counties will meet in Augusta May 15 under the Joint auspices of E. J. Watson, commissioner of agriculture of South Carolina, and the Georgia chamber of commerce.

J. D. Price, Georgia's commissioner of agriculture; Dr. A. M. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture at Athens, and Judge John A. Cobb, of Americus, president of the Georgia Agricultural society, will attend the meeting.

Other meetings of this character will be held later.

DANIEL TO BE TRIED DURING THE MAY TERM

Cases Against Ragsdale and Barber Set for That Term Also

POLICEMEN NAB HEN LIFTER IN THE ACT

Startled by the clank and rattle of chains, Bicycle Officers Hudson and Barker ran up a dark alley in West End Monday night and caught an alleged chicken thief by the name of Lark—Willie Lark, colored.

Lark, it is alleged, was trying to unwrap chains which a West End citizen had wound around his chicken coop as added thief protection. The lock was already broken, said the officers; when Lark saw them he "flew the coop," but the policemen nabbed him. They say he confessed to many recent chicken raids in West End, and they think that his capture will mean chicken security in the future for West Enders.

The Finest Loaf That Was Ever Offered to the American Public

When we placed the famous Butter-Nut Bread on the market we did so with the absolute knowledge that no better bread had ever been produced.

And the immediate favor which it won in thousands of homes showed that the housewife—and her family—thoroughly agreed with us.

Butter-Nut was so much better than ordinary bread that there was no comparison.

Now, however, we've discovered a way to improve even Butter-Nut.
Not in the quality of the ingredients—for that couldn't be bettered.
Not in the formula—for that couldn't be bettered.
But we discovered—and control exclusively—a new process of mixing which enables us to turn out the lightest, tastiest, most appetizing loaf of bread you ever saw.

The New

is on sale today in all good grocery stores. And we want every housewife in town who isn't using Butter-Nut now to try just one loaf.

Especially we want the woman who bakes her own bread—because she wants her family to have the best—to try the New Butter-Nut.

It's the taste that tells—and by the taste of this improved Butter-Nut we want you to judge it.

Serve it to the family; see if they don't say it's the best bread they ever ate.

And you thousands of women who are already delighted users of Butter Nut will find the new loaf better than the best.

10 cents the loaf at all grocers. But look for the Butter-Nut label.

Order early to avoid disappointment.

"HUGUENOTS" IS SUNG IN MAGNIFICENT WAY; CHORUS AT ITS BEST

Martinelli Given an Ovation, Hempel, Kurt and Garrison Divide Honors of One of the Best Performances Ever Given Here

By DUDLEY GLASS.

Lovers of the beautiful in music are declaiming today with interest, and enthusiasm, three voices new to Atlanta, heard for the first time in "The Huguenots" Monday night by an audience which was more than generous in its applause. The new singers were Giovanni Martinelli, tenor; Melanie Kurt, soprano, and Mabel Garrison, a mezzo-soprano, whose voice was all the more charming in that it came practically unheralded.

The silver tones of Frieda Hempel and the resonant baritone of Scotti are too well known in Atlanta to demand new praise. Adamo Indoir, the bassо, had a better role than has ever been given him before in the auditorium, and Leon Rothier's big basso was at its best in the St. Bris role. It was perhaps the greatest cast ever offered in one opera in the South, and the ensemble numbers were sung equally as perfect as the individual arias. The chorus has never done anything quite so magnificent as the great scene in the fourth act, "The Benediction of the Swords."

The audience was more discriminating last night than it had been in former seasons but none the less enthusiastic. Opera has become so fashionable in Dixie that audiences seldom interrupt the finale of an aria by bursting into applause but wait until the last notes have faded and there is noticeable this season, far less of the whispered conversation that is so unfair to adjacent seat holders who have come to hear opera rather than gossip. It is only the new opera-goer who betrays his lack of understanding by audible comment while the musicians have the stage or who drowns the fine shadings of a duet by ill-advised applause.

Perhaps the most pleasing feature of the opening night was the singing of Martinelli as Raoul. He had been highly praised by New York critics, and his fellow singers do not hesitate to call him the logical successor to Caruso"—when Caruso shall have a successor—but it was not until he had soared into the beauty of the first act romanza "Fairer Far Than Any Lily" that Atlanta realized just how great a tenor had come to make his southern debut. A tumult of applause swept over the audience as Martinelli took his seat. Equally as beautifully sung was his duet with Mme. Kurt in the final act, and his voice was as appealing in the recitatives as in the several tuneful arias given the role. Martinelli is but twenty-eight years old, and the next few seasons should give him a mastery of his voice which will place him among the really great tenors of the age. And last night was his first appearance in the role, upon any stage.

Melanie Kurz, the German soprano, proved equally as pleasing from a musical standpoint. Her voice is a "big" one, crystal-clear, perfectly controlled mathematically accurate. If she did not throw herself as feelingly into the role as one might have desired this is due rather to her training for such stately, superhuman roles as Brunhilde and Isolde rather than more "human" parts of the French and Italian school. Her voice recalls the great soprano of Olive Fremstad, who has not been heard here since the first season five years ago, and it has all the strength and volume of the great Gadski's. It is to be hoped that the Metropolitan will some day bring "Tristan and Isolde" to Atlanta and give Mme. Kurz an opportunity to be heard at her best.

MABEL GARRISON A GREAT SURPRISE.

In Mabel Garrison, the charming young soprano, the audience had a distinct treat. She sang the famous page's song with such ripples and trills and bird notes, as we have seldom heard and she received a real ovation. It is to be regretted that the inordinate length of the opera made it necessary to cut the score severely and omit, among other numbers, the second act cavatina given by the page's role.

Didur, who has often been heard in Atlanta, came into his own in "The Huguenots." His big first-act number, "Piff Paff," seemed rather subdued, but when he and Mme. Kurt sang their duet in the darkened street, his voice revealed marvels of delicate shading.

Mme. Hempel, as the queen, sang the "Fair Land of Touraine" aria and the splendid "A Questa Yoco Sola," which follows it in a marvellous way. Atlanta is fond of the coloratura passages of the Italian opera, and Mme. Hempel gave us a bit of "fireworks" equally as delightful as in her "Traviata," and "Rosenkavalier," roles of past seasons. Her Gilda at the Thursday matinee and her Queen of the Night in "The Magic Flute," promises to be among the week's greatest bits of artistry.

Scotti, as the Count de Nevers, revealed the artistic qualities of his singing to the delight of his friends. The role gives him no great numbers such as the "Pagliacci" prologue, but it is nevertheless a part which makes heavy demands and he sang and acted it like the great artist he it. The one regret of his Atlanta admirers was that which came in bidding him good-bye at midnight, for he was to sing but once this season, and was forced to hurry back to New York.

CHORUS AT ITS BEST IN "THE HUGUENOTS."

But even with such a cast of principals "The Huguenots" will live most in memory for its truly magnificent choruses. The stage is frequently filled with the entire company, chanting the Lutheran choral, swinging into the vociferous "Ratapian" chorus, or raising the echoes in some great ensemble with a dozen different parts. Signor Polacco handled the singers and the orchestra in splendid manner, and the climaxes several times swept the audience to its feet for a thunder of approbation.

The ballet, introduced in two acts, proved a revelation, and Mme. Rosina Galli, the girlish premier danseuse, was found to be as pretty as she was graceful. In fact, the close of her dance in the third act was received with as much vociferous applause as any vocal number of the evening. The ballet will appear again in "Rigoletto," and in "Carmen."

Burning, Sweaty or Sore Feet.

Don't endure foot agony. Here is quickest and surest remedy known. "Two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in warm foot bath." This gives instant relief; corns and callouses can be peeled right off; excess sweating or tenderness is overcome and bunions reduced. It acts through the pores and removes the cause. Get a twenty-five-cent package of Calocide at any drug store. Prepared at Medical Formula, Dayton, O.

STATESBORO MINISTER GETS REAL HELP

Rev. J. Powell Tells How He Found New Strength to Give to His Labors

Rev. J. Powell, of Statesboro, Ga., suffered from stomach troubles so seriously that they affected his work.

He struggled on under the handicap as best he could—hardly realizing, perhaps, just how much his sickness was hurting him.

One day he learned of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. He took the first dose—then decided to take the full treatment. He wrote:

"Since using the six bottles of your wonderful remedy I feel like another man. It has been quite a wonder to me to know how one could have a stomach disease like mine and live and do the work I did. I just escaped the operating table.

"Now I can eat what I please and it doesn't hurt me night or day."

Mayr's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned.

A Card From THOS. H. JEFFRIES

(Candidate for Ordinary)

To the Voters of Fulton County---

I was not induced to enter the race for Ordinary by any meeting or any ring. I am not a member of any ring, neither am I supported by any ring.

Having served many years in a subordinate position, I have a laudable ambition to better my condition and surely I have as much right to make the race for Ordinary as the Coroner.

The charges of Ring and Political trickery are untrue and without foundation and are made simply for the purpose of prejudicing the voters of this County against me and are simply cheap political "Clap-Trap."

I believe the voters of this county are too intelligent to be caught by any such specious and demagogic appeals and that they will fittingly rebuke these efforts at the polls.

Speaking of rings, Mr. Donehoo came to me and besought me to join him as his Clerk upon his ticket for Ordinary and proposed to share equally with me all the profits of the office.

I presume if I had consented, there would have been no ring; as I declined, there must be a ring or Mr. Donehoo would not have anything to talk about.

As to claim that the office of Ordinary should be filled by an attorney, I say

First, the law does not require it.

Second, Judge Wilkinson, who filled the office so long and ably, was not an attorney, and

Third, eighty percent of the Atlanta Bar are supporting me over my opponents, who are both attorneys.

Cordially,

The Passing of the Pessimist.

Surveying the facts and prospects of business from a national point of view, the New York Commercial remarks that whereas a month ago the pessimist could get a patient hearing, today he is laughed at on all sides. This recovery of cheerful spirits is due not so much to a change in fundamental conditions as to a clearer and steadier vision of things as they really are. "We were prosperous," says the Commercial, "we are prosperous, and now we are enjoying prosperity because we recognize its presence."

While this is true, it is none the less evident that the actual developments of the last few weeks have played a large part in restoring confidence. The rise in the stock market, the improvement at many points in railroad earnings, the definite plans of great railroad systems, such as the Pennsylvania, to spend millions of dollars for new equipment, the upward trend of bank clearings and the advance in cotton prices—these and sundry other developments of the kind appeal to the most doubtful and quicken the pulse of the most despondent.

As a matter of fact, underlying conditions in the United States have been sound from the day the war began. Last autumn we gathered one of the greatest harvests in the world's history. Our natural resources were unimpaired. Political issues that long had shadowed business were adjusted. The relations between government and business were more candid and in every respect more satisfactory than they had been for many years. In these circumstances, it was inevitable that prosperity should spring up and put forth its leaves and bear abundant fruit.

The first effect of the war was naturally depressing, especially whose great money crop was without a market for the time being. But the ensuing effect of the war was to increase the value of products which this country possessed in comparatively unlimited stores. Month by month our export trade has mounted. We have become the world's one great source of supply, and also its financial center. That which far-sighted observers perceived from the outset is now borne in upon the rank and file. The people have lost their apprehension. The mass of them are encouraged and are, therefore, able to move constructively forward. Confidence, which is the basis of enterprise, has been restored, and enterprise awakens. Pessimism has had its day. Optimism, at once thoughtful and buoyant, is the ruling force of the time.

The trouble with the Dardanelles is that they were not designed with a proper entrance.

One can imagine the feelings of the Ananias Club while the members read the proceedings of the libel suit.

It strikes us that Canada is a bit touchcous about annexation, especially since Champ Clark never got in a position to do anything in this connection.

Boards of Trade for Small Towns.

One of the happiest omens of Georgia's future is the enterprise of small towns in organizing boards of trade or kindred institutions for the development of their business and civic resources. Though not yet as extensive as it should be, this movement is making steady progress, and wherever it finds expression its benefits are so pronounced that other communities are inspired to fall in line.

A particularly interesting example of what can thus be accomplished is furnished by the Decatur Board of Trade, organized four years ago by the public-spirited business men, professional men and farmers of that community. Writing in a recent issue of The Journal, Mr. Charles D. McKinney, who has generously aided undertakings of this character in the State at large as well as in his own town, pointed out some of the striking results from the Decatur organization. Among them are an excellent system of highways, some twenty-five miles of sidewalk and curbing, an improved system of tax records, several new school buildings, a far-reaching and defective campaign of civic advertising, a doubling of population, an increase of taxable values in the town from $1,378,512 to $2,850,000, and in the county from $7,896,295 to $11,735,170.

The keynote of the Decatur Board of Trade has been co-operation and service. Says Mr. McKinney: "It has always striven to express its public appreciation of the good work being done by the various officials of the town of Decatur and of the county of DeKalb. It has steadfastly refused to take any part in 'knocking' these officials. On the other hand, it has made such careful study of the financial resources of the town and county as always to be in a position to understand just why at various times these officials could not do certain things, in themselves very desirable but impossible to be done on account of the lack of money." Further:

> "In the truest sense of the word, the Decatur Board of Trade has been progressive in that it has constantly urged its members not to be satisfied with conditions as they are, as long as there is room for improvement. Through its various committees it has made careful study of such important matters as better sanitary conditions, better educational facilities, better public records, better roads and better agricultural methods. These committees have given the result of their investigations to the public and to the officials charged with responsibility to carry forward these phases of public work. . . . The Board has never taken part in politics and never passes resolutions either condemning or advocating public measures to be decided by the votes of its members; so, it has never taken part officially in the various campaigns for bond issues in the town during the last four or five years. But the constant agitation of the Board for better educational facilities has brought about such unanimity on the part of the citizens that every bond issue proposed in the last four years has carried by a large majority."

What has been accomplished in Decatur can be accomplished in any other town whose citizens will plan and work together for the community's upbuilding. Decatur's population was less than twenty-five hundred when its board of trade was organized. Its resources and opportunities though rich indeed were no richer than those of many other Georgia towns. Decatur has grown and prospered because its people have poured thought and enthusiasm into their common interests, and because they have had in their Board of Trade the practical machinery for organized, systematic endeavor.

There are now some eighty institutions of the kind in Georgia. Each of them means a great deal to the development of the county as well as the town, for the far-sighted, efficient board of trade is concerned with agricultural as well as commercial and industrial affairs. Every town in Georgia, large or small, should effect such an organization. The State Chamber of Commerce stands ready to assist at the outset and to co-operate at all times. Efforts upon this line will quicken the growth of the individual communities and advance the prosperity of the entire Commonwealth.

They came, they sang, they conquered.

Colonel Roosevelt should know by this time that in politics you can't stone glass houses.

Millions for "Movies."

It is estimated that the American people spend two hundred and seventy-five million dollars a year on moving pictures, that the sum of one hundred and twenty millions is invested in the theaters where they are presented, and that the production of a single film frequently costs between fifteen and thirty thousand dollars. An amusement that has reached such financial proportions necessarily plays a broad and intimate part in the life of the people, and if conducted upon the higher standards that have been set its influence should be distinctly wholesome.

It is interesting to note that the educational side of moving pictures receives more and more emphasis. Scenes of travel and nature and stories taken from history or classic romance are wonderfully portrayed. They foster good taste at the same time they instruct and entertain.

The Atlanta Woman's Club, through a special committee, has done admirable work in this connection by providing for Saturday morning productions, at the Grand, selected and censored particularly for the school children of the community. These pictures are of cultural value as well as fascinating. They are proving immensely popular, and are a helpful accessory to the school system itself.

Every man knows how different he would act if he were some other individual.

Think, and Live Long.

BY H. ADDINGTON BRUCE.

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Psychology and Parenthood," Etc.

Boiled down into two words, the best prescription in the world for the elixir of long life is "dieting" and "thinking."

This was experimentally demonstrated more than 400 years ago by an Italian gentleman of quality named Luigi Cornaro.

Having nothing to do and a great deal of money to do it with, Luigi Cornaro disported himself so gorgeously that by the time he was forty he had acquired a reputation a Broadway speeder might envy.

Also he had acquire a bad kidney, a worse liver, and a decidedly erratic heart. Half a dozen doctors looked him over, shook their heads mournfully, and advised him to lose no time in making his will.

But Luigi, who had always been accustomed to having his own way, told the doctors flatly that he did not intend to die.

"I know what is the matter with me," said he. "I have eaten too much and drunk too much, and I haven't used my brain enough. But now I am going to change all that, and I mean to live to be a hundred."

What is more, he kept his word. To be exact, it was two years over the century mark when he surrendered to the grim reaper.

Nor did he whesne and whine and maunder through a decrepit old age. He enjoyed life to the last, and remained so hale and hearty that at ninety-five he was able to finish writing a big book telling how he had managed to live so long and keep so young.

And that which in substance he advised his readers to do was TO DIET and TO THINK.

Quite recently the very same prescription for long life was given to me by a man far more famous than Luigi Cornaro—the head of Harvard university, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, who, at eighty-one, is astonishing the world by the vigor and variety of his activities.

Said Dr. Eliot:

"There are two things a man must be sure to do if he wants to live to a happy, healthful, useful old age. "One is to eat and drink in moderation—to be temperate in all things. The other is to give his mind exercise as well as life. Do you really think?"

Now, these are the very things that most of us neglect doing.

Far too many of us drink too much, especially of alcoholic beverages. And nearly everybody overeats.

As for thinking, nine people out of ten do not think at all in the true sense of the term, but are content to let others do their thinking for them.

Reader, I put it to you personally.

To which class do you belong? Do you lead a temperate life? Do you restrict, and her lofty demands on human nature made it impossible for her to give or to receive the passionate affection which might have fille her life. But after careful study it is impossible to resist the conclusion that she more than most women felt the deep need of all women, that the right home and the right husband and the right children might have given her the satisfaction she could not get from books or thought or art or nature. . . . Madame du Deffand, at seventy, fell in love with a man of fifty. This world-worn, life-wearied, pale, frail, dusty heart was suddenly set beating by another as cold, as disillusioned, if not as bored as hers, that of Horace Walpole, a bachelor, a dilettante, and an Englishman. And this old woman's love was no mere fancy, no indifferent whim, lightly caught and blown off like a feather. It was a real, intense, absorbing, overwhelming passion, like that of a girl of twenty or a woman of forty. "Everybody loves after his own manner; I have only one way of loving, infinitely or not at all." The thought of you enters into everything I think and everything I do." This is the tone, not for an hour or a day, but over and over and over, for eleven years. . . .

A passion like this, full as it is of tragedy and pathos, will at times tempt ridicule. The sincerity and fine intelligence of Madame du Deffand make it impossible for a sympathetic reader even to smile at her. But Walpole was by nature abnormally sensitive to ridicule, as he himself confesses. To be praised as if he were a god, and loved as if he were an opera tenor by an old lady of seventy, whom he knew to be living in closest intimacy with the most critical and mocking wits of the world, placed a man of his temper in an exceedingly difficult position. Beware of romance he cautioned mildly. But she laughed at him. Romance!—at her age! She had never been romantic, had all her life stripped the veil of sentimental illusion from the cold bones of reality. Romance! Her feelings were nothing but common, daylight friendship. In which she was quite wrong for nothing about her was or could be common or of every day. . . .

So felt Walpole. And he still shuddered at the thought of the vast gulfaw of future generations. . . .

It is a curious thing that the two greatest women letter writers of France perhaps of the world, Madame de Sevigne and Madame du Deffand should each have built the main fabric of their correspondence on an exaggerated not to say abnormal affection. It is far more curious that this affection should be with Madame de Sevigne the one flaw in a singularly well-balanced character and with Madame du Deffand the most marked symptom of health in a character otherwise erratic, distorted and unsound.—Gamaliel Bradford, in the April number of the North American Review.

"Portrait of a Lady:---Madame de Deffand

If we probe still deeper we come across a curious fact in Madame du Deffand's temperament, which seems to explain many things. Under all her misery, all her discontent, all her boredom, she was aching for love. Perhaps she was incapable of it. Perhaps her keen vision, and her deep mistrust, and her lofty demands

Benzonia Trout Are "Submarined"

BENZONIA, Mich., April 23.—Bill Taylor's remarkable luck in catching trout over on Herring Lakes creek is explained. It is all due to the war in Europe.

Herring creek runs into upper Herring lake, and it is pretty fair trouting water. Bill knew it, but the stream has been fished so often the trout are shy and hide well.

This spring Bill got a German carp and kept it in a tank at home educating it to understand that the brook trout are English. When it got this idea he carried it down to the creek and put it in.

It commenced to act as Bill's spy, slipping up around big boulders until it located the trout, then backing away and signalling Bill by flirting its tail above water.

Bill says if the war doesn't end he and the carp will break all records for trout in these parts.

Quips and Quiddities

"What is your reason for believing in the nebular hypothesis?" asked the man who is always seeking information.

"I don't know that I exactly believe in it," replied the scientist. "But after a man has gone to the trouble of finding out what it is, it seems a shame to contradict it."

They were very fond of each other and had been engaged, but they had quarrelled and were too proud to make it up. He called afterward at her house—to see her father on business. She was at the door.

"Ah—Miss Blank, I believe?" said he. "Is your father in?"

"No, sir," she replied, "father is not, at present. Do you wish to see him personally?"

"Yes," was the bluff response of the visitor, who felt that his former sweetheart was yielding—"I want to see him on very particular business"—and he turned away haughtily. . . .

"I beg your pardon," she called after him as he reached the last step, "but who shall I say called?"

SPRING FLOODS

I.—PROSPECTS FOR THIS YEAR.

By Frederic J. Haskin

WHEN April 1 arrives, as it did this year, without the Mississippi river having evinced an intention to go on a mighty riot of destruction, those who live in the shadows of its levees relax that tension of evil impending which gripes them through each succeeding spring. A Mississippi flood is usually the result of a repetition of storms, beginning in February and following one after another until that whole vast region between the Alleghanies and the Rockies becomes water soaked and pours fourth its volumes into the single channel to the sea. So, when April this year arrived with a general condition existing that bordered on drought, the denizens of the lowlands felt secure.

For flood in the Mississippi basin is the rule of springtime rather than the exception. Since white men first settled along that mighty father of waters there have been many more seasons of flood than the reverse. Then there are the two years in the immediate past, 1912 and 1913, which registered the highest stages of water that the basin had ever known, and there was the fear that this condition might become chronic.

* * *

When these Mississippi floods are unleashed there is set in motion the most titanic force that this nation knows. The tentacles of the great stream reach out to the east and tap the moisture that finds its way into the streams of the valleys of New York. Again they reach to the west to the point where the snows of the lofty Rockies rest on the very top of the continental divide, and to the north into the crystal lakes of Canada. They are the outer of all that vast country between these extremes, and thence south to the Gulf of Mexico. All the rainfall and snowfall of 1,240,000 square miles finds its way into the Mississippi. Six nations like France or Germany could be laid down in the region drained by this stream. Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria and Italy could be cast into this region and there would still be space for a nation larger than any one of them. An inch of rainfall in this basin would cover the state of New York two feet deep in water. A moderate rain of three inches throughout the Mississippi valley would submerge Connecticut to a depth of fifty-five feet.

And most of this region is one of heavy rainfall. The Red river and the Arkansas bring in great floods from the west. The Yazoo, the Tennessee and the Cumberland are heavy contributors from the lower reaches on the east bank. The Ohio brings in its mighty floods from Pittsburg and the north. The Missouri reaches into the vast northwest where rainfall is generally light but heavy precipitation and snow melting sometimes occurs. The Mississippi itself drains the great central basin. In all there are 13,000 miles of river that leads into the one channel.

It has never happened that a flood has come down from the various tributaries of the Mississippi simultaneously. This condition is highly improbable, and it is improbable that it will happen for centuries to come. Yet it is a possibility. And should all these streams concentrate their flow into the central channel as the same time there would be a flood such as can with difficulty be appreciated. It is the thing that is most dreaded by those who have in hand the supervision of the great stream.

The manner in which the storms of the Mississippi valley occur is fortunate in that it distributes the run-off. Practically all the downpours that are likely to cause floods sweep across the area which drains into the Mississippi from the direction of Texas and exit to the northeast in the direction of Labrador. As a matter of fact, these storms originate in the Pacific ocean, find their way across the states of the west and are usually first reported from Utah, Nevada or Arizona. When they get into the Great Plains area they find a peculiar condition that diverts them to the south, in which direction they travel until they reach the Gulf of Mexico. Here they are turned back and strike straight for Labrador and are eventually lost in the North Atlantic.

These storms are usually accompanied by heavy rains in Louisiana and Mississippi, and here they contribute their floods to the father of waters. They work steadily north and northeast. The Yazoo, the Cumberland and the Tennessee rivers are filled with their downpours. These waters start to the gulf. But by the time they reach the lower Mississippi the rains that have fallen there have already passed to the ocean. Then the storm breaks over Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Here is a great belt of comparatively level country which concentrates its waters into the Ohio river. This region is the mother of floods. Fortunate it is again that the rains have first fallen on the lower streams, for the Cumberland and Tennessee and those farther down have had a chance to empty themselves before the floods of the Ohio reach Memphis.

Now, if one of these same storms should reverse itself and travel from Labrador to Texas, it would start the floods at the headwaters and would follow them downstream, always adding other floods when the water is already high. So would the stage of high water from a given storm be much greater than at present. The flow of air currents is such, however, that this condition will probably never come about.

The two greatest floods that the Mississippi valley has ever known were those of 1912 and 1912. Of these the latter was more severe for a short time, but the former was the longer sustained. The flood of 1912 was due almost entirely to one stupendous downpour over Ohio and Indiana, in which as much as eleven inches of rain fell at one place in four days. In a number of places the precipitation was ten inches, and five inches was an average over a considerable area.

But the flood of 1912 was entirely typical, and the conditions that caused it were more nearly those that may be expected to repeat themselves. With the breaking of spring the storms from the southwest began to evince themselves. Beginning late in February and lasting entirely through March, there was a series of six of these storms, one on the very heels of the other. Gradually the whole of the Mississippi and Ohio valleys became saturated with water. This created a condition under which it was necessary that all water that fell should run off. At the same time there were considerable accumulations of snow up toward the Great Lakes, and then, later, warm rains melted this and put it into the streams at the end of the flood season, when it was most dangerous.

So it happened that the greatest strain that had ever been experienced was put on all the reaches of the Lower Mississippi. The duration of this flood was over two months. Toward the mouth of the great river the flood stage lasted eighty-three days, and did not end until late in June.

It is difficult to appreciate the vastness of a stream flow like this. The great river rose at Vicksburg, for instance, sixty-five perpendicular feet. This vast wall of turbid waters pushing on to the sea was five to ten miles across. The depth of it, the force of it, the very volume of water contained in its onrush is so great as to stagger the imagination. On top of a stream that is already the greatest waterway of the continent and of the world, with possibly one exception, there is added twenty or thirty or forty feet of additional depth, and this is spread out for miles in width, and the whole runs on to the sea like a millrace.

Many and fantastic are the actions of this mad stream on a rampage. Below Memphis, for instance, much of its course is through a wide belt of waste land, where it is allowed to run riot at will, usually corseted in at a distance with a fringe of levees. Old pilots relate to the traveler on the stern-wheel river boats, that still ply here, many tales of the freaks of the stream. There is a point some twenty miles below Vicksburg, where, in war time, the river maintained a direct course through the lowlands. Ten years later it seemed to tire of its decorum, abandoned this direct course and struck off through the bayous to the left. Twenty miles through the jungles and swamps it wandered, twisting itself like a snake, taking a great bite out of the shore of Mississippi, and returning after having traveled sixty miles to a point not 600 feet below that from which it had digressed. So when the old river bed it had thrown up a barrier of sand which made it necessary that it should follow the new course it had laid out.

IN THE TRENCHES 100 YARDS FROM FOE

BY HERBERT COREY.

(By Mail.)

LILLE, France.—It was the dead Englishman who helped us to understand. We had been walking through the front trenches at La Bassee. The day was hot. The ditches were so deep that we could by no possibility see over the embankments. Under foot the plank runway was slippery with mud. We knew we were the first party of correspondents to be taken into the trenches opposite the English position—now and then we could hear an English bullet whistle overhead—but on the whole the adventure did not seem promising. We jested about a romp to the front as we toiled along in our heavy overcoats.

Then we looked through a loophole. The man looking through a porthole. He did not turn to look at our rather noisy party.

We had come to a part of the trench that was both wider and deeper than the approaches through which we had been laboring. There were more men in sight. Some of them were carrying Flour sacks filled with earth, with which the embankment walls were made higher. Some were sitting about smoking. Others were squatting on the floors of the "unterstande"—the timbered caves in the trench walls in which they live and take refuge from shells—and peered out at us. Their faces were on a level with our knees. They seemed quiet and rather tense. I got an idea that our laughter jarred on them. Here the rifles were racked outside the bomb-proofs. The men could seize them as they came out of their shelters.

There was something about the back of that man who looked through the porthole that held our attention. If you have ever seen a hunter on a deer runway you will know precisely what I mean. He was rigid, and yet there was a nervous elasticity in his pose. We looked again, and saw that he was nuzzling up to the cheekpiece of a rifle. He was watching the enemy through the eyehole in the port. His orders were to fire if he saw a head. Our laughter died out rather suddenly. War had become a grim business to us. We knew now why these men in the trenches watched us with a certain disapproval as we joked. Death was too near.

LOOKING THROUGH A PORTHOLE.

"Look through the portholes," said Captain Kliewer, of the general staff, who was our official chaperon.

The sentry saluted and stepped back. I put my eye to the slit in the steel port. At first nothing could be seen outside except sunshine and bare, gray-brown earth. My vision was distorted because my eyes were just above the level of the earth. Lie upon the ground some time and raise your head so that your chin just clears. You will find that things look oddly different to you.

"Do you see him?" asked the sentry.

There was no one in sight. It seemed minutes—the time was perhaps to be measured in half seconds—before I found the thin line of yellow clay that marked the English trenches. It was about a hundred yards away. These trenches are three months old, so that the tints of the upturned earth have merged with those of the background. Between the English and the German trenches lines of barbed wire run, and they confuse the unaccustomed eye. I might never have found the English trench except for a sparkle of light which came from near the surface of the ground. It was the sun shining on a rifle muzzle.

"Yes," I said to the sentry. "He is watching us."

"No," said the man sombrely. "He is dead."

I kept on peering through the porthole. Then, suddenly—almost with a shock—my eyes adjusted themselves to the need. I saw, not ten feet away from me, lay an Englishman dead. His snuff-brown uniform had so blended with the neutral earth that I had to look twice to make sure. He seemed just a youngster, clean shaven, with a kind, manly face. One strong hand was half opened. It seemed to hold a small card photograph. I am not certain. Suddenly I could not see.

"He was hours in dying," said the sentry, "and we could not help him."

My eyes began to do their duty only too well. Wherever I looked I saw the English dead upon the ground. I went from port to port, and the story was the same. Some of them were hanging in the wire entanglements. Often they had been shot standing apparently, and stooped forward slowly, until their bodies were caught about the middle by the wires and so were held. One man was seated, his back resting against a post. His mouth was open, as though he had been shrieking as he died. All the other faces that I saw wore a look of peace. It seems incredible, but it is so.

"There were 500 dead men on a front of 500 metres," said an officer. "We counted them."

ALL THE PIONEERS KILLED.

The English had attacked at 9 o'clock in the morning, ten days before. For an hour or more the artillery had been playing on the wire entanglements. "Spanish riders," as the Germans call them, with some mediaeval significance that I did not understand—until gaps had been torn in them. The wires had not been cleared away, of course. They hung about in loops and knots. But they were no longer affixed to the posts. The pioneers were sent forward.

"They always die," said a soldier, as one stating an obvious fact. "All of them."

It seems likely. Their duty is to prepare the way for the men who come after. They run forward with planks, with which they bridge the tripping snarls of wire. They cut the wires with great nippers. They drag the posts out of the ground and push aside the movable entanglements, when these wire-wrapped skeleton rollers are use. They rarely reach the trench. They are not expected to.

"The officers tell them to fall forward when they are shot," said a man, "so that their bodies will cover the wires and make a bridge for those who follow."

It sounds brutal, inhuman, preposterous, I know—but I believe it. They do things that way in war. Upon a given moment the English fire upon the Germans trenches had ended, and the English yell—the yell of the charge—began at all the German heads that rose above the level of the trenches. They had but a hundred yards to go in this race with death, but 500 of them died on the division front of 500 metres. That is almost one man to each yard. Forty men achieved the incredible. They did what humanity cannot do. They forced their way through those wires in face of that blasting fire and into the German trenches.

"Two were wounded, and surrendered," said the Germans who had been in the fight.

The others died. One takes that for granted in trench fighting. The man who has the desperate valor needed to charge through that by every rule is impregnable—to leave the comparative safety of his trench knowing that he must almost surely die—does not battle his way into that other ditch only to surrender. His plan is to die, but to die fighting. That is why the thirty-eight Englishmen who fought their way into that cut in front of La Bassee were buried underneath our feet. Those who did not reach the trench finally flinched before the fire. Those were they taking their wounded with them. The dead were left behind.

That was ten days before. Through every porthole as we looked out at a barren, gray-brown landscape dead Englishmen could be seen. Three hundred of the 500 who had died on that 500-yard front had been buried by night. Mostly their poor, broken bodies were dumped in the great holes made by shells. It saved digging. Some were buried by the German sentries who move between the lines at night. Others were interred by their English comrades. No truce was made for the purpose. Truces are not being granted in this war—or being asked.

"The bodies which hang upon the wires cannot be touched," one soldier said to us in a matter-of-fact way. "The others would hear the wires twanging and would fire. So that we only bury the bodies we can bury safely."

That is not inhumanity. It is war.

RAILROAD MEN ASSEMBLE FOR MEETING WEDNESDAY

American Association of Railway Accounting Holds Annual Session Here

Four continents were represented Tuesday when the vanguard of delegates to the twenty-seventh annual convention of the Association of American Railway Accounting Officers assembled at the Piedmont hotel.

They came from many parts of the United States, Canada and Mexico; from Central and South America, Cuba and Porto Rico; from South Africa; from the Philippines—to attend the largest and most important railroad convention organization in the world.

Most of the delegates Tuesday were out playing golf, for the convention does not open until Wednesday morning. They were getting their hands in, posting themselves on the lies and bunkers of the Brookhaven course, preparing for the tournament Friday which is one of the big features of the convention.

Last year Frank Nay, controller of the Rock Island railways, and a golf enthusiast, donated a trophy, which was won twice in succession, becomes the property of the winner. And Mr. Nay himself won it the first time, playing over the course at Minneapolis. At Brookhaven Friday he will try for it again, while competitors will also have the chance to win the consolation cup offered by W. H. Williams, third vice president of the Delaware and Hudson railroad.

THE REAL BUSINESS.

Golf, however, is by no means the real business of the convention. Representing 276,000 miles of railroad in its membership, every important express company in North America and many inland and coast-wise water carriers, its purpose is by committee reports and discussions to gain mutual enlightenment and advancement in methods of railway accounting.

The association was organized in 1887 and has grown by leaps and bounds. American railway accounting is recognized as the foremost in the world and the association, as its official organization, brings to its conventions representatives of many foreign countries to study American methods. To the Atlanta convention come delegates from the government railroads of South Africa for this purpose.

Its members are from the Canadian Pacific and Canada's government roads, the Southern, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Sante Fe, Rock Island, New York Central and nearly every other road of importance in the United States, including every road that enters Atlanta, the Mexican Northwestern and the Inter-Oceanic railroad of Mexico; the Panama railroad, the Cuban Central railways, the Porto Rican railways, the Philippine railways, the Maderia-Mamor railway of Chile, the Central Argentina railways. All told, the members represent more geographical territory than any other organization in America.

OPENS WEDNESDAY.

The convention opens at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning at the Piedmont with an invocation by Dr. W. S. Memminger, rector of All Saints church. There will be addresses of welcome by Governor Slaton and Mayor Woodward. C. B. Seger, president of the association, will reply. At noon Monday the delegates will go to Stone Mountain in a special train furnished by the Georgia railroad. There they will be entertained at a barbecue and dance, and will be shown over the mountain and the granite quarries.

While visiting ladies are entertained Thursday with an automobile ride and tea at Brookhaven, the members will begin their business sessions in the assembly room of the Piedmont. The sessions take the form of an open forum, with reports by ten committees on problems that have been brought to their attention by members during the year. The discussions will be largely technical. The convention either adopts or rejects the reports of the committees. Representatives of the inter-state commerce convention will be present and the Georgia railroad commission has been invited.

Thursday night the delegates will be entertained at a dance in the main dining room of the Piedmont. Friday the golf tournament takes place at Brookhaven, and in the afternoon many delegates will visit the federal prison.

They leave Friday night for Birmingham, where they will be shown through the mines.

The officers of the association are as follows: President, C. B. Seger, vice president and controller of the Union Pacific railway; first vice president, R. A. White, general auditor of the New York Central and Hudson River railway; second vice president, L. A. Robinson, controller of the Chicago and Northwestern railway; secretary, E. R. Woodson, of Washington, D. C.

PERSONAL WORKERS' LEAGUE MAKES REPORT

The Personal Workers' League of Atlanta Evangelical churches has made 765 converts during the month of April according to figures announced Tuesday by Rev. A. M. Hughlett, president of the ministers' association.

In Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian and Christian churches during the week ending April 25 converts were received. Last Sunday 156 by letter. During the entire month 528 were received on profession, 237 by letter.

NEGRO HELD ON CHARGE OF STEALING MAIL

Will Stokes, a negro, was bound over Monday by U. S. Commissioner W. Colquitt Carter, on the charge of stealing a pair of kid pumps from the mail at the Terminal station. Postoffice inspectors said a mail sack had been cut open. The pumps were sent from a Boston factory to an address at Greenville.

NEGRO PLEADS GUILTY TO SNATCHING PURSE

Henry Trawick, colored, charged with snatching the purse of Mrs. Patrick O'Connor, 10 Bonzela street, Saturday afternoon, was bound over for robbery to Recorder Johnson Monday afternoon under $500 bond. The negro pleaded guilty.

THEATERS

Everybody in Atlanta did not go to grand opera Monday night. The Forsyth was packed. As to the bill, there are two or three acts on which are best handled by the least said about them. But there are other acts on the bill that are individually well worth the price and the time. Among these may be mentioned Toby Claude and the "Monkey Vaudeville Band." Both of these acts are better than good. They are great, and entirely eclipse the few bad features.

William Smythe, with Toby Claude, is also very good, as are the two other members of the act. Toby Claude herself is without question one of the very best musical comedy stars seen here this season. When you see her you can't help but think of Anna Held.

To attempt to describe the "Monkey Vaudeville" is impossible. But it is a scream and a complete knockout for any case of blues in the world. It must be seen to be appreciated.

Nelson and Nelson open the bill with comedy acrobatic work on stilts.

The Monarch Comedy Four, the next number, bring down the gallery with songs and small-time comedy.

Lucy Gillette, "The Lady From Delf," proves that men have no monopoly on strength and juggling. She handles with equal ease all kinds of articles, ranging from balls to chairs and tables.

Eunice Burnham and Charles Irwin, the fat woman and the man who plays the role of "polite stew," have a fair act.

That Norman Hackett is a favorite here was evidenced by the warm greeting he received.

The bill, as a whole, is good.

Hazel Dawn, as the feature of the Paramount release "Niobe," broke every attendance at the Grand since the theater has been devoted to the movies. All day yesterday the big theater was crowded with delighted people who found the theater comfortable and the picture being projected in big city style. The picture is one of the best Paramount productions ever made, and will be continued for today only. Tomorrow and Thursday the feature will be the first release of the new combination of Vitagraph - Selig - Lubin - Essanay, Inc, "The Juggernaut," a five-reel thriller, with Anita Stewart and Earl Williams. This picture has been seen at a private exhibition for exhibitors and has been declared to be one of the greatest features given to the movies.

Best Laxative For Children

When your baby is cross and fretful instead of the happy, laughing little dear you are accustomed to, in all probability the digestion has become deranged and the bowels need attention. Give it a mild laxative, dispel the irritability and bring back the happy content of babyhood.

The very best laxative for children is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, because it contains no opiate or narcotic drug, is pleasant tasting and acts gently, but surely, without griping or other distress. Druggists sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

GRADUATE NURSES TO BE GIVEN DIPLOMAS

Sixteen Young Women Will Leave Grady Training School Wednesday Night

Sixteen young women, members of the largest graduating class in the history of the Grady hospital training school, will receive their diplomas at the commencement exercises at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at Grady hospital.

The address of the day will be by Asa G. Candler. Rev. Dunbar H. Ogden, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, will deliver the invocation, and Rev. Charles O. Jones, pastor of Trinity church, the benediction. Dr. Baxter Moore will present the class pins, and the delivery of diplomas will be by Edmund W. Martin, president of the training school.

There will be music.

Invitations have been issued to a reception and dance at the hospital Wednesday evening.

Following are the graduates: Miss James Kathleen Barnhill, Goldsboro, N. C.; Miss Stella Grogan, Lithonia, Ga.; Miss Eva Sue Middleton, Hendersonville, N. C.; Miss Emma Sindonia Smith, Wedowee, Ala.; Miss Loudie Melvinia Matthews, Manchester, Ga.; Miss Mary Lee McDermett, Atlanta; Miss Hattie Mae Askew, Mount Tabor, S. C.; Miss Mildred C. Brown, Clinton, S. C.; Miss Sarah Gertrude Shepard, Atlanta; Miss Lola Marie Lance, Etowah, N. C.; Miss Leora Bernice Davis, Buckhead, Ga.; Miss Nellie Narcissa Buchanan, Chesterfield, S. C.; Miss Lucy May McManus, Atlanta; Miss Florine Partridge, Atlanta; Miss Nora Estelle Herring, Calvary, Ga.; Miss Nancy Jane Hicks, Adel.

SUPPER DANCE AT CAPITAL CITY CLUB FOLLOWING OPERA

The ladies cafe at the Capital City club was the scene of a beautiful entertainment Monday evening, in honor of the opera stars and distinguished guests, who were entertained at supper following the opera.

The officers and directors of the Atlanta Musical Festival association were hosts of the occasion and surrounding the large central table reserved for the artists were smaller tables arranged for parties of six and eight. Smilax was festooned over the windows and connecting arches and each small table had a centerpiece of pink meteor roses and valley lilies reflecting the beautiful decoration of the large table. On this was a plateau of roses with baskets of roses and lilies placed at each end of the table. Bisque figures representing dancers, tiny musical instruments and other souvenirs were distributed among the guests. Following supper dancing was enjoyed in the large ballroom on the third floor, which was elaborately decorated.

Nearly all of the stars were present and seated with them at the large table were the directors of the festival association and their wives, as follows: Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gentry, Colonel and Mrs. William Lawson Peel, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Bidwell, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lee Crew, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, Mr. John Temple Graves, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kriegshaber, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wessels, Mr. and Mrs. W. Woods White, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. Victor L. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Seabrook.

A large party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh E. Murray, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst and party, of New York City.

An oblong table seating forty-five was arranged at one end of the cafe. A large design of pink roses rose from the center, illumined with tiny electric globes and graduating toward the ends of the table were silver baskets filled with glowing pink roses and valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray's guests included Mr. and Mrs. Hearst, Miss Nina Segourney, Miss Helen Hamilton, Miss Margaret Goodrich, Miss Madeline Cochran, Governor and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mrs. Albert E. Thornton, Mrs. Charles Murkamp, of Fredericksburg, Va.; Mrs. Blair Flandrau, of New Orleans, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair, Mr. and Mrs. Doughty Manley, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. DeGive, Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Adair, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Nunnally, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip McDuffie, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dorsey, Mrs. Don A. Pardee, Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Andrews, Mr. Orrin Peck, of New York; Colonel Willis Ragan, Dr. E. G. Ballenger, Mr. Franklin Mikell, Mr. James Ragan, Dr. Harold McDuffie, Mr. Henry Lyons and Mr. James Alexander.

A group of lovely visitors present at the supper dance were Miss Elinor Castle, of East Orange, N. J.; Miss Viola Johnston, of Macon; Miss Lydia Belle Kuehnle, of Iowa; Miss Mary Orme, of New Orleans; Mrs. Percy Smedley Darlington, of West Chester, Pa.; Mrs. Leon Duer, of Macon; Miss Claire Bridgelow, of Jacksonville, and Mrs. J. V. Hudson, of Lynchburg, Va.

REPRESENTATIVE AND BRILLIANT AUDIENCE ASSEMBLED AT PREMIERE OF GRAND OPERA IN ATLANTA AUDITORIUM

HONOR GUEST IN OPERA PARTY

MISS MARGARET GRANT.

WHEN the famous crimson velvet curtain of the Metropolitan Opera company was drawn aside Monday evening the great opera stars of the world faced a representative and brilliant audience assembled from many different points in the north as well as the south. The dramatic climaxes of "Les Huguenots" emphasized by the brilliant arias held the audience spellbound until the closing scene when the silver notes of the bell drifting through the spellbound audience announced that the famous massacre of the eve of St. Bartholomew had begun.

The opera boxes and floor of the auditorium presented a scene of sparkle and light and color with beautiful women in evening gowns of taffeta and tulle. Between acts the aisles and lobbies were thronged with visitors and their hosts, and the exquisite costumes worn were the theme of much interested comment.

Beautiful Costumes at Opera.

Mrs. James R. Gray was gowned in black satin and tulle with overdraperies of rare lace and her corsage was of parma violets.

Mrs. John Marshall Slaton's beautiful gown was fashioned of apple green taffeta with flounces of lace on the skirt caught at intervals with pink rosebuds. The sleeves were of filmy tulle and the waist was confined with a band of silver cloth.

Mrs. J. A. Gallogly wore a beautiful gown of pink crepe de chine with overdraperies of pink and blue tulle, and the dresden colors of the pretty gown were continued in her flowers which were orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., was gowned in white taffeta fashioned with ruffled skirt, the bodice was of filmy white tulle and she carried pink roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Walter Andrews wore a strikingly beautiful model of green taffeta combined with silver lace, lace, caught at the waist with a cluster of rich red berries.

Mrs. Forrest Adair was gowned in white satin combined with tulle.

Miss May Atkinson wore white net over foundation of blue, the skirt was fashioned with scallops of turquoise blue taffeta, the bodice was of blue and gold and she carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Inman Gray was beautifully gowned in pink charmeuse satin, fashioned empire, the bodice was of pale pink tulle and she carried pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Harry M. Atkinson was gowned in black chiffon satin combined with jet and lace, a French touch was introduced with the use of dull blue on the bodice and her flowers were orchids.

Mrs. Elizabeth Winship Bates wore white taffeta combined with net and pearl trimming, and she carried pink roses.

Miss Annie Winship Bates wore blue taffeta with bodice of gold net and high girdle of cloth of gold.

Miss Adrienne Battey's strikingly pretty gown was of white satin suspended from the shoulders with rhinestone straps and finished with black velvet roses spangled with rhinestones.

Mrs. George M. Battey wore a handsome toilet of black satin with touches of white lace and chiffon.

Out-of-Town Guests.

THE USE OF SOAP SPOILS THE HAIR

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), is cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—(Advt.)

WARRANT DRAWN FOR PENSIONS FOR VETERANS

A warrant covering the last payment of the 1915 pensions for Confederate veterans was drawn by Governor Slaton Thursday morning. This warrant amounts to $497,165 and covers pensions due veterans in sixty-two counties, including Fulton. Pensioners in the other 38 counties have already been paid. The total pension appropriation this year amounted to $1,070,000. Under the law pensions must all be paid by May 1. It will be two or three days before the state treasurer will be able to get all checks out to the county ordinaries.

Music They All Loved

Two Lancashire boys were entertaining on the relative merits of their fathers as musicians.

"My father is the greatest musician in the town," said one.

"Oh!" the other said, "when my father starts every man stops work."

"How's that?" said the other. "What does he do?"

"He blows the whistle for meals up at the mill."

Garden Party

A delightful occasion of Tuesday afternoon, following the matinee performance of "Tales of Hoffman," was the tea dance at which Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. DeGive entertained at their home on Peachtree circle.

The handsome residence so well adapted for entertaining was decorated throughout, each room differently adorned with a special spring blossom. The wide reception hall was softly lighted and across the wide open fireplace was banked a tier of wild pink azalias, interspersed with woodland ferns. Rustic jardaniers and vases filled with the fragrant wild flowers were placed along the walls and handsome foliage plants concealed the orchestra, which was stationed on the landing leading to the upper hall.

In the library a color scheme of silver and pink was effectively carried out, with the use of hanging silver baskets filled with pink crabapple blossoms. The sun parlor had wall pockets, filled with branches of flowering dogwood, which showed with charming relief against the green draperies, palms and ferns.

The table in the dining room from which buffet supper was served in the early evening, had a large silver loving cup filled with pink carnations resting on a beautiful lace cloth. Silver candlesticks were shaded with pink silk, and all minor details carried out a pink and white color motif.

Punch was served from a bowl placed upon the trellised terrace overlooking the rose garden. Baskets filled with azalias graced the edge of the terrace and the punch bowl was presided over by little Miss Pauline DeGive, Miss Mary Faith Yow and Miss Sarah Yow, and Miss Frances Ellis. Small tables were placed on the terrace and during the dance the guests had refreshments in the open and at early twilight the terrace and open porches were illumined with colored electric lights.

Mrs. DeGive received, wearing a beautiful garden costume of white filet lace with inset cream lace medallions, made over a foundation of white taffeta. Her hat was a lovely model of black Neopolitan straw finished with a spray of gourra.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Ellis assisted in receiving, Mrs. Ellis wearing a lovely white lingerie gown with a white hat.

Among Mr. and Mrs. DeGive's guests were many of the opera stars, Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Mrs. Percy Smedley Darlington, of West Chester, Pa., and other attractive visitors who are here for the week.

ULM AND WORSHAM CHAMPION FISHERMEN

Two Capitol Officials Bring Back the Evidence to Back Up Their Fish Tales

Major A. H. Ulm, executive secretary to Governor Slaton, and Dr. F. Lee Worsham, state entomologist, have qualified as the champion fishermen among officials of the state capitol.

They returned to Atlanta Tuesday after a two days' fishing trip in the bay at St. Mary's and brought with them some exceedingly interesting fish stories as well as the evidence to back up these stories.

The evidence consisted of ten fifty-pound drum, which they explained represented but a portion of the catch made by the party of which they were members. Major Ulm and Dr. Worsham did their fishing on Saturday and Monday, and their party caught about thirty big fish, averaging fifty pounds each. They were caught with hook and line and the two Atlanta men landed several of the big fellows.

The fish were brought to Atlanta by express and were hauled to the capitol Tuesday morning on a truck, where they were viewed and admired by hundreds, after which they were cut up and divided among the capitol officials.

ATLANTA MAN'S FATHER DEAD IN SANFORD, N. C.

I. T. Bass, of 17 Marion street, conductor on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad, received a message Monday from Sanford, N. C., informing him of the death of his father, T. L. Bass, mayor of the town.

Dispatches from Sanford stated that Mayor Bass shot himself through the heart with a rifle, leaving a note in which he declared continued ill health was the cause of his act. He was a candidate for re-election and had spent the day campaigning on the streets.

It was stated at his son's home in Atlanta that I. T. Bass left at noon over the Seaboard for Sanford.

WILSON GIVES VIEWS ON RIGGS BANK CASE

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 27.—President Wilson does not consider the legal controversy between the Riggs national bank and treasury department officials involves any administration policy. He told callers today that in his opinion the powers of the comptroller of the currency were perfectly clear and whether they were too great he thought a question for congress to decide.

The president said he was keeping in touch with the situation but that the department of justice was handling the case and would continue to do so.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BED TIME

By Thornton W. Burgess

If for another you will do
Some homely, kindly, little deed;
Maybe some day 'twill happen you
Will find a friend when most in need.

Of course, that is a selfish way of looking at things. Certainly. Kind deeds should be done just out of kindness of the heart and not with any thought of reward. But it is true that just as surely as the sun shines the reward will come sooner or later. It was this that was really at the bottom of Peter Rabbit's idea of the Quaddles. Peter felt that if all the little people of the Green Meadows and all the little folks of the Green Forest and the Smiling Pool would agree to watch out for common danger and warn each other and so do each other a kindness, it would make life a great deal easier for all. So he called a meeting of certain of his particular friends to tell them about his plan.

He hadn't told them what the meeting was for, but simply that it was most important that each should be there. No one had promised to come, but Peter hadn't a doubt that most of them would be at the big hickory tree by the Smiling Pool as soon as jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had gone to bed behind the Purple Hills. "They'll be so curious that they can't stay away," he chuckled as he brushed his coat carefully and made ready to start for the meeting place.

And Peter was right. When he got there he found every single one whom he had invited had got there before him. Bobby Coon, Unc' Billy Possum, Prickly Porky, Jumper the Hare, Happy Jack Squirrel, Chatterer the Red Squirrel, Billy Mink, Little Joe Otter, Jerry Muskrat, Danny Meadow Mouse and Jimmy Skunk were all there. Those who could climb were up in the big hickory tree, while the others were underneath it. Peter felt very important and he tried to look as important as he felt. In fact, I am afraid Peter fairly strutted as he saw all eyes turned in his direction. He hopped up on a little mound where all could see him and cleared his throat. Then he looked this way and that way to be sure that Reddy Fox was nowhere about, and that Hooty the Owl wasn't in sight. Then in his best speech-making voice he began:

"Friends and neighbors," said he, "I have called you together to tell you about the Ancient and Supreme Order of Quaddles."

"The what?" squeaked Danny Meadow Mouse.

"The Ancient and Supreme Order of Quaddles," repeated Peter, rolling the big words out grandly.

Jimmy Skunk scratched his head in a comical way. "Somebody must have been careless and left those big words lying around and Peter ate them," said he.

Everybody but Peter laughed. Peter pretended not to notice the interruption.

"Ancient," he explained, "means very old. Supreme means the most important, and Quaddles means little quadrupeds.

"What's a quadruped?" piped up Danny Meadow Mouse once more in his funny, squeaky voice.

"You are," retorted Peter. "Any animal having four feet is a quadruped."

"What's an order?" asked Bobby Coon.

"A society. A lot of people banded together for some purpose," replied Peter.

"And that's what I've called this meeting for. It seems to me that we all ought to help each other more than we do. When there are common dangers about, like men and boys and dogs, each one ought to warn his neighbors, and when we find another in trouble we ought to try to help him. It would make life lots better for all of us. So I thought we might band ourselves together with a promise to do this and call ourselves the Quaddles. Of course, our families all go back to the days when the world was young, which means that quadrupeds are ancient, and, of course, they are most important, and so supreme. And so I think Ancient and Supreme Order of Quaddles makes a very fine sounding name and means something. I thought it all out myself."

"Hurrah for the Quaddles! I'll join," cried Billy Mink. Everybody else followed his example at once, and so the Quaddles came into being.

Food Facts for the Workingman's Wife To Study.

Your owe it to yourself, your husband and family to buy all food stuffs from practically one standpoint—nutrition. Other factors count, of course, but nutrition should not be sacrifced for anything else, for nutrition is the basis of economical food buying.

Most workingmen's wives serve too much meat. From a standpoint of nutrition, meat is dear food. Some meat is essential, but we can profitably substitute other nutritious but much cheaper food.

There's Faust Spaghetti. When we eat it we absorb practically all of it; most of it goes to enrich our blood and build up our bodies. Faust Spaghetti is made of Durum wheat—a highly glutinous cereal. Sold in large 10c packages—is a splendid partial meat substitute, is easily prepared and makes fine eating. Try plenty of Faust Spaghetti—cut down on meat.

You will like the taste of Cottolene-cooked foods

In addition to making food better, Cottolene makes it taste better—gives it more appeal to the appetite—a relish that cannot be obtained with any other shortening or cooking fat.

Cottolene

is itself a choice pure food product. It consists of the most highly refined cottonseed oil, combined with selected beef stearine.

Cottolene has for a quarter of a century been a leader among pure food products. Make your biscuits, your pies and your cakes more tempting, more pleasing to the palate, more easily digested, by using Cottolene for shortening.

Always heat it slowly and use one-third less than of any other shortening or frying fat.

NOME CITIZENS TO VOTE ON CONTINUING SALOONS

NOME, Alaska, April 27.—A special election has been called for May 5 to vote on whether Nome shall continue to license saloons. Petitions requesting the election were presented to the United States district court by the dry forces, who are waging a vigorous campaign.

Women now vote in Alaska and much attention is being given their attitude by both sides as it is believed their votes will be an important factor in deciding the issue.

Nome, which is the metroplis of the Bering Sea region, has a winter population of 2,500 which grows in summer, when navigation is open, to more than 5,000.

Coming Bout Hard to Figure

Hanlon's Punch vs. Whitney's Cleverness and Experience Is Proposition—Budd-Young Bout Should Please

Local boxing fans are figuring carefully over the outcome of the ten-round match scheduled between Frank Whitney and Eddie Hanlon at the Bijou theater Thursday night of this week. Inasmuch as both boys have boxed here on many previous occasions practically every follower of the fistic game is familiar with the style of each, and nearly everybody you meet carriers his own opinion of the merits of the two boys.

The average fan sizes the situation up about like this: Whitney is decidedly the cleverer boxer of the two, and knows more about the game. Hanlon is some heavier and carries a much harder punch. The question at issue, therefore, is whether Hanlon can get his punch over against Whitney defense, or will Whitney block him, and outpoint him decisively enough to land a decision at the end of the bout?

There are a few things to be remembered. First and foremost that Hanlon slipped one past Jimmy Perry for a knockout in a match between the pair something like a year ago. Second that when it comes to blocking and countering, that Frank Whitney has more elbows than a boarding house chicken has wings, and you can exactly put a guy out, when battering his elbows and forearms, regardless of the amount of steam behind the punch.

Indications are that this tg going to prove a live active battle. Whitney has yet to meet a man locally with whom he declines to stick in there and mix it. When they climb into the ring with Frank they must either box, run into a clinch continually, or else gallop around the ring with him in active pursuit. Hanlon is a willing mixer, and it is a cinch he won't be always running away. Furthermore Whitney doubtless has an edge on him in work at close range, and he will be concerned in standing back and starting that wallop of his.

The last bout at the Bijou between Leo Houck and Knockout Brown was characterized by many as slow because the two declined to stand toe-to-toe and slug it out. This coming match will leave little room for criticism along these lines, if the two boys live up to their past reputations. The Budd-Young match should be as interesting as the main bout.

Dent vs. Hogg Program Today

It looks like Dent vs. Hogg at Ponce de Leon today. If this pair of husky fight-handlers are right, there should be little in store for the fans. The Crackers took Hogg's measure in the opener at Mobile. He has not faced them since then, however. On the other hand, Dent is credited with two wins on his two times out. In one case he was rather lucky to get away, but in the last start, he went the route after the fashion that made him such a hero with the fans during the 1913 campaign. Co-operating with an old head like Sid Smith back of the plate he ought to be a hard man for the Gulls to beat.

Today is Ladies' day and the game will be called at 3:30 o'clock. Since a bit of confusion over the Ladies' day proposition appears to exist, it may be stated that holders of season passes will be admitted free, as on all Ladies' days. Otherwise they will be required to pay the regular admission price. Ladies holders of these books can buy tickets on other days for 25 cents.

Following is the probable line-up:

Test of Law on Fight Pictures

NEWARK, N. J., April 27.—A legal contest by the owner of Willard-Johnson fight films to bring the films into this country will begin here next Friday, according to an announcement by Charles A. Towne, formerly United States senator, counsel for L. Lawrence Weber, the owner.

The first step preliminary to the beginning of the legal battle was taken here yesterday when Mr. Towne made a formal demand upon the collector of the port that the pictures be admitted. Refusal was given on the ground that the federal statutes forbade it.

Mr. Towne then served notice that he would ask Judge Thomas G. Haight in the United States district court, on Friday, for an injunction restraining the collector from refusing to admit the pictures. It is expected that argument will be heard about a week later and that the pleadings will involve not only the law barring the pictures is unconstitutional.

Mr. Towne said that his application for an injunction would set forth that the owner desires to bring the pictures into this country, not for sale, but for exhibition by himself. He said it would be admitted that they are films of a prize fight, not of a boxing bout.

BY GRANTLAND RICE

ON THE OTHER PAW—

"Just let this thought sink into your soul; the mummy ain't had no fun for more'n five thousand years."—Bill Barlow.

You said it, Bill; a face full, too—
You had a hop on that one, pal;
That's what I call a "fellow through"
Worth shooting at in the corral;
Yet, taken up from play to play,
Although the battle's ups and downs,
Believe me, Bill, this mummy lay
Has got us pushed below the Browns.

"The mummy ain't had any fun"—
Well, neither has he rent to meet;
No daily labor to be done—
No "monthly statements" clog his beat;
And far away from modern law,
Beyond the range of shrapnel science,
He never heard of Harry Thaw
Or bet his money on the Giants.

"The mummy ain't had any fun"—
Well, maybe not—but all in all
He's had a fairly healthy run
Of luck at least amid the thrall;
No panic's left him broke or bent—
But far away from Troy he's flung
Five thousand years he slept content—
The mummy—helBill—HE should worry.

"Managers report players are hustling better than last year," Which is logical enough. As the game was drifting quite a number of earnest young athletes were beginning to draw visions of $2 a day jobs in the not so very distant future—said job ranging from 7 to 6 p. m. in place of from 3 to 5 each afternoon.

SAFETY FIRST.

The occasion doesn't often arise in a ball game where it is to a player's disadvantage to make a hit. But according to Sir Michael Donlin this occasion once existed.

"Any time," says Michael, "that I got a hit off Rube Waddell the rest of my afternoon was spoiled. I had no further pleasure left in the game. After that one hit I spent the rest of the afternoon with my foot in the water bucket. For the Rube remembered each guy that hit him safely, and it was a case of ducking the bean ball on the next trip to the plate."

"A base hit," added Mike, "is something; but having your head used as a target the rest of the day is also something."

THE HIGH COST OF SPORT.

Colonel Howard Mann has gone out after these high priced boxers with a battleaxe—a crusade that deserves further support.

This matter of paying fighters from $5,000 to $10,000 for ten-round exhibitions—amounts demanded by Gibbons, McFarland, Welsh and others—is the veriest smear of bunk in its rawest form. There isn't one of them worth $2,000 for a ten-round dancing jubilee. The only sane system is to pay them from $500 to $1,000 a night and cut the scale of prices down within reason. The $5 and $10 seat scale should be pruned to $1 and 2, which is as much as any ten-round fight is worth at a liberal estimate.

"But they won't fight for that amount," one might suggest. Better still. Then they may have to go to work—a catastrophe that none of them would like to face.

Crazy prices demanded by leading boxers have hurt general interest in the game, and in the end will drive it on the reefs. And any fight fan who pays over $2 to see a ten-round boxing match is Bizarre in the Bean, not to say Comical in the Cupola.

ONE REASON.

Dear Sir:

Why is Alexander, of the Phillies, considered by so many as the best pitcher in the National League?

R. C. K.

Because he happens to be the hardest pitcher in the league to beat, the breaks of the game being equal.

He also happens to have a trifle more stuff than other rival workman in his circuit, which might be used a second rejoinder.

FAMOUS LINES.

"It's better to have led and lost than never to have led at all."—Patrick Moran.

"Gone, all gone, the old familiar base hits."—John J. McGraw.

"Into the night go one and all."—C. McGillicuddy.

CONSIDERABLE BOOST.

Those who figure that Chick Evans is an erratic golfer should talk over the situation with Snake Ames, of Princeton football renown and Chicago golfing glory.

"I have played golf with Chick," said the old Tiger star, "for at least ten years—ever since he was a young kid, in fact—and in all that time I have never seen him play one bad game of golf—one game where his score went as high as 88 or 89."

"Here is still another point," Mr. Ames continued. "Take thirty consecutive medal play rounds over any golf course in America, and I will back Evans against any golfer in the world—amateur or professional. I know there isn't an amateur in this country who could give him a hard fight in such a long test. Since last summer he has added another twenty yards to his drive, and is now the longest driver I know of. Up to the green he is supermiraculous—but there he stops, for Chick is still a bad putter."

This may sound a trifle strong, but Colonel Ames is an excellent judge, and he has either played with or against the best golfers in the country. So his opinion carries unusual weight.

THE ULTIMATE DREAM

The average duffer might ponder this over. Imagine playing golf three times a week for ten or twelve years and never playing badly enough to notch an 88 or an 89!

Or is there any duffer living with an imagination that keen?

C AND C

Cobb and Crawford have been stacking up base hits and runs for ten years. In this time they have done more than their share of tally making—for they have never been equalled in the history of the game.

And now, after ten seasons, in place of slowly drifting back to prove again that Youth Will Be Served—and such—these two are tearing into the ball with greater ferocity than ever. Probably never before have they finished the first ten days of the campaign at such a clip, where their deadly bludgeons have broken up so many contests. Given only fair pitching to tighten up the Tiger defense and this pair will furnish the needed offensive strength, even should the rest of the cast slip back.

Cobb this season is working harder than he ever worked before—not even barring 1911, when he reached top form and scattered records to the Seven Winds. If he and Crawford can finish out the schedule uninjured, Jennings has his chance to reach the top again after a six-year lapse.

No wonder Connie Mack is wearing a puzzled look. He built up one of the great machines of baseball—won four championships—and found that such a procedure failed to pay. Then he cut down the power of his cast and discovered this was still worse. For some reason Connie has had hard time thrilling the public breast or or arousing the usual frenzy. It may be that he is merely a baseball manager—not a showman. At any rate, he has deserved a kinder fortune for the work he has done.

"Kid" Long Dead

CHICAGO, April 27.—Irving "Kid" Long, who, a few years ago, was rated as one of the best pocket billiard players in the country, died at a hospital here yesterday of ptomaine poisoning. It became known today. He competed in a number of championship tournaments. Long was born in Hopkinsville, Ky., forty-two years ago. Burial will be at Nashville, Tenn., his mother's home.

Eastman Wins First

EASTMAN, Ga., April 27.—In the first game of this season Eastman shut out McRae here Monday afternoon 4 to 0. The game was an exceptionally good one. Eastman made two runs in the third when the bases were full and Peacock singled. Vaughn and Skelton, of Eastman, hit doubles.

Score by innings:

| | R. H. E. |
|---|---|
| McRae | 000 000 000—0 5 2 |
| Eastman | 002 000 00x—4 5 2 |

Batteries: Davenport and Gilbert; Vaughn and Wade. Umpire, Bohannon.

Reservists Figure in First Victory Over Gulls

BY INNIS BROWN

Manager Bill Smith's reserve forces, or secondary attack, proved a large factor in the routing of the Gulls in the first game of the current season Monday afternoon, said routing having been accomplished to the tune of a 2 to 1 victory in a twelve-inning battle.

And while the added punch served to put the game on ice after the prolonged struggle, a shrinkage reserve showed away in the good left arm of Jim Allen operated to keep the Gulls under control, after things had settled down following a little introductory chapter flurry.

The reservists in chief were Joe Jenkins and Billy Lee, and their service consisted of two timely singles at critical times. Acting in connection with these came a perfectly good safe blow delivered by Otto Williams. This blow followed the work of Jenkins and served to land the locals on safety for a breathing spell, preparatory to launching into the finish. Lee delivered his swat in the nature of a knockout punch, after the Crackers had pulled alongside the Gulls in the eighth, passed the contest along to the archives with a proper finish attached thereto, from the standpoint of local fandom.

But to get back to the effectiveness of Jim Allen's pitching as a defensive proposition should be stated, for the benefit of such fans as may be camping with that Jim let the Birds down with a measly total of four hits stretched over an expanse of twelve frames. And pounding for the first two which were separated by a single blank round, these blows were landed as much as four innings apart, counting a sparsity not calculated to cause any particular consternation in camp.

Opening the ninth inning, Elmer Miller got the slant of one of Jim's shoots, and fired it far over Roy Moran's head for a complete tour of the bags. It was a clean smash, and carried full credentials, for an uninterrupted trip over the hassocks. Thereafter the Gulls were no longer dangerous. As a matter of fact only four other Gulls ever reached first, and two of these were scuffled in in two-ply fashion, so that just two men were left on bases.

In the meantime, after the third inning, the Crackers were peppering Lefty Leo Townsend's assortment rather freely, until the time came, when a safe single to center over a few runs. Then the Gull flinger managed to tighten up enough to make the going too rough for successful navigation by the locals, by countering this resistance. Townsend was aided by some rather bad work on the bases, but, just the same, he was doing quite a bit of pitching.

It was not until the eighth that the locals managed to check a runner in an open-field control. With two men down, Allen smashed a clean drive back of Dobard and Cowan. Timon Bowden's left hand swings at Townsend's portside twirling but never very effectively, and Manager Smith detailed Jenkins to swing for Timon. The choice was a good one at the time, but it was only that sent Allen speeding to third. It was then up to Otto Williams, and the kid box fielder landed a clean one for the counted Allen with the tying run. With Sid Smith at bat, and Townsend none too steady, the prospect was for a long rally like the home guard might ease over the winning count then and there. But Smith took too much chance on a scheme to run Jenkins in from third, while he was being run down between first and second, and the opportunity was lost.

Neither side was able to turn a wheel in the ninth, tenth or eleventh. The Gulls got one man on in the eleventh, but Allen promptly snuffed Townsend out on strikes. The Cracker had a chance in that same frame, but Lee's pinch swat was not forthcoming. Starting the twelfth Bisland coaxed a pass from Townsend, the only one he issued during the game. Elbel beat out a hit to Perry, when Calhoun made a desperate effort to spear the ball, and no one covered. Bisland was forced at third on Tullos' bunt, and Neiderkorn, batting for Allen, died to Dobard back in short left center. With two gone, Billy Lee, who had been sent to left to replace Bowden, after Jenkins had taken the turn at bat in the eighth, singled to left and Elbel scuttled over with the winning run.

A few of the Crackers' antics on the base looked a little off-color, or rather they ended in misfortune. The best planned play in the world looks bad, when it fails to get through. Possibly if tried again, the boys would get away with several of the tricks that were ambushed by the opposition Monday.

The pitching of Allen was easily the feature of the game. Aside from the one long hit which netted a run for the visitors in the first they never had a look-in. He whiffed eight, and walked but one man.

The game was rather remarkable in the matter of performances that would permit a batter to take his turn and yet not be charged with a time at bat. Thirty-six faced Townsend and all save one are charged with a time at bat. Forty-six faced Townsend and only one got a look. Each man walked but one time, neither hit a man, nor was there a sacrifice hit made during the game.

Powell pulled the fielding feature of the day. In the tenth inning he chased in from deep left toward second and grabbed Allen's low fly, when it looked practically certain to fall safe. He also made use of a sixth sense in camping away back near the dump for Sid Smith in next round. Had he been anywhere near his regular position, Sid would have landed a sure triple.

Bill Rumler was doing his best to end the fray in taking his time at bat in the ninth. Bill took three healthy wallops, and had either connected squarely with the ball, the game would have been over then and there. Nobody was on, but Bill was taking a cut that would have meant a sure homer if he had landed.

WINNERS AND LOSERS

After Monday's game you have to hand it to the Cubs for perseverance. After the Reds had grabbed a seven-run lead in the opener they kept right on away until they found themselves leading at the end of the sixth by a count of 12 to 11. At that, they lost out in the end. Seven pitchers were used by the two teams.

Big Bill Jacobsen was sent in by Hughey Jennings as a pinch hitter in the eighth against the Browns. He tripled and scored the Tigers' only run off Wellman on a sacrifice fly by Bush. The Tigers' regulars could not hit Wellman.

The Peaches scored enough runs on homers in their second game with Jacksonville to win the contest. Chancey and Munn both hit Pratt for circuit wallops, while the Tarpons counted but one run all told of Wychendorff.

Jeff Tesreau, the Ozark Bear Choker, stopped the rout of the Giants by downing the Dodgers in the shut-out 2 to 0. Uncle Wilbert Robinson's charges landed but two safe swats and were never dangerous. Daubert, Bridges and Hargrave were banished for protesting decisions.

Long distance hitting won for the Yankees over the Senators. Pipp touched Rosenthal for a homer with three on board, and Cook smashed out a homer with two men on ahead of him. The Nationals scored two for his team when he hit for the circuit, counting McBride.

Alexander scored his third straight win of the season over the Braves. He whiffed ten batters. Two of the Phillies' counters came over when Gowdy threw-ing to third hit the runner and the ball bounded away from Red Smith. Gowdy, Smith and Schmidt were banished after an argument, in which they claimed Cravath, who was hit, interfered.

Frank Manush's Babies got a stiff backset by dropping the two games to Columbus. Folmar cinched the opening game with a home run while two men were on in the first inning. Hawkins had the Babies on a string in the second game.

The Baltimore Feds rapped Ed Lafitte for twelve hits, but he kept them well enough scattered to hold their running-getting to four. Holt broke through Bailey's guard with a homer in the seventh, after which the Brooklyn counted five more runs, cinching the game.

All of the Chifeds' seven runs against the Kansas City club were earned: Long George McConnell held the Kaysees to five hits, and they were never able to get around on him. Hanford was the batting star for the Chifeds.

Jimmy Austin was the pinch wallop-er for the Browns in their victory over the Tigers. With two men on and two down, Jeems singled, scoring two runs. The score was tied at one all at the time, and the Tigers were unable to overcome the lead in their half of the inning.

Riverside Boys Play Tech Wed.

In the nature of a substitution for the games which were scheduled with the Florida Gators in Gainesville, and were called off at the last minute, the Tech baseball club takes on the Riverside Cadets Wednesday at Lakewood field for a single contest. Coach Frank Anderson writes that his team is in good shape and is going at a rapid gait. The Jackets of course expect to beat the preps, when the latter will come with the intention of making the contest spirited from the start.

The Gainesville boys have a good strong line-up. In Morris they have a corking good hurler, while Jones behind the bat is far above the average of prep receivers. With this strong battery they should make the Jackets work hard to down them. Following is the battle front which Coach Anderson will send against the local collegians: Jackson, cf.; Jones, c.; Scarboro, rf.; Harden, lf.; Thurmond, 2b; Stribling, 3b.; Arnold, ss.; Tabor, 1b.; Morris, p.

2,500-Acre Farm in Putnam County and Stock in a Gainesville Bank Figure in a $55,000 Exchange—Two Sales of DeKalb County Acreage Tracts Are Reported Tuesday—Ordinance Pending in Council Would Enlarge Fire Limits

Dill & Shannon announced Tuesday an exchange of farm land and bank stock, whose aggregate consideration was $55,000.

The deal sold for Mr. and Mrs. H. F. DeJarnette, of Eatonton to W. A. Mitchell, president of the Farmers and Merchants bank, of Gainesville, 2,500 acres of farm land in Putnam county, for which Mr. Mitchell gave his stock in the bank, having tendered his resignation as head of that institution.

DEKALB ACREAGE SALES.

Parris & Lang, of Decatur, have sold for T. M. Wright to N. J. Pitts, a tract of 53 acres on the Lawrenceville road, about three-quarters of a mile east of Decatur, for a consideration of $2,250, all cash.

They also sold for E. Dickey to a Mr. Gaines, 37 1-2 acres in land lot 93, of the fifteenth district of DeKalb county, known as the Mitchell farm, for a consideration of $2,500, Mr. Dickey taking in exchange two houses near the Atlanta steel works.

FIRE LIMIT EXTENSION.

An ordinance for the extension of the fire limits has been introduced in the city council by Councilmen Farlinger, Dallas and Renfroe, which will come up for action next week, and which will have a vital effect on property owners who may contemplate improvements in the new limits.

The ordinance is detailed and lengthy, but it prescribes enlarged territory ranging from a quarter to a half mile.

This means that if the ordinance should be adopted, property in the new limits would come under the restrictions put on that in the old as to roofs and brick construction.

LIQUIDATION AND BEAR PRESSURE CAUSED BREAK

Market in New York Closed 8 to 11 Points Down from Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 27.—May notices, estimated at about 10,000 bales, were reported to be circulating in the cotton trade here this afternoon, except in a few specialties speculative and after opening steady at a decline of 4 to 9 points in response to weak cables, prices rallied to within 2 or 3 points of last night's closing figures. The notices were promptly taken up by trade interests. There were further reports from the southwest claiming damage to cotton crop prospects from recent heavy rains.

The early rally was followed by rather a sharp decline under renewed liquidation and forced selling accompanied by a break in the English market and reports that the British government had prohibited exports of cotton to all Europe except Russia, France, Spain and Portugal. Within a few months sold ten to thirteen points lower, but offerings tapered off at this level and prices showed rallies of 3 to 4 points shortly after midday.

Trading was quiet during the middle of the afternoon with active months showing nine to ten points net lower.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, April 27.—Conflicting reports concerning the condition of cotton out in new York caused a lower opening in cotton today. Offerings were estimated at fifteen lots all the way from 15,000 to 21,000 bales. In the first half hour of business prices were four to six points.

Estimates of May notices in New York were increased to 30,000 bales and this, coupled with misleading reports concerning England's attitude toward exports of cotton, widened the decline to 12 to 18 points. The prohibition of exports of cotton from the United Kingdom was twisted to mean exports from the United States.

The market was unsettled and irregular in afternoon dealings, but at a net loss of six to thirteen points.

HAYWARD & CLARK COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, April 27.—Liverpool came in about four points lower than due, quoted spots 4 points down, sales 10,000 bales. Unfavorable political news probably had a depressing effect. Nothing really a fact that the numerous predictions of peace by May, which formed the basis of a considerable speculative support during the past three weeks have not been fulfilled. The Journal of Commerce, in a review of conditions in the country, warns against excessive optimism. It says that conditions are generally improved, there are no features justifying reflection.

Our market opened four to six points down but rallied quickly on buying met on the dip and rallied quickly in spite of further weakness in Liverpool where futures dropped as much as eight points. Early advices from New York reported about 21,000 tenders against May, but with the large carryover from March there could never have been any doubt that tenders would be promptly accepted.

The weather may showed better conditions in the west. Indications are for a partly cloudy to fair belt. There is, however, a rain formation heading towards Carolinas and prospects are for a break in the dry spell over the northeastern quarter towards the end of the week.

The weekly weather and crop report tomorrow is expected bullish on account of floods in the West and drouth in the east, and thus formed the basis for buying this morning, but the market broke sharply after the close of Liverpool to 10.10 for July on news that the British government had prohibited the export of cotton to all Europe except Russia, France, Spain and Portugal.

Washington predicts a week of generally fair weather for the entire belt with seasonable temperatures. Waco, Tex., says: "Reports from central Texas show much land under water. Fear extensive loss to corn and that land will go into cotton at three price."

IRREGULAR PRICE CHANGES SHOWN IN STOCK MARKET

Bethlehem Steel, Beet Sugar and Interboro Up—Reading and New Haven Off

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 27.—Irregular price changes prevailed in today's early stock market dealings, but these were limited to fractions except in a few specialties speculatively United States Steel, which was under especial pressure on yesterday's close opened with a lot of 2,500 shares at 57 7-8, a quarter point above the Pacific as a group registered nominal declines. likewise Reading and New Haven, Missouri, Kansas and Texas preferred lost almost two points, and United States Realty full two. In other parts of the list the movement was somewhat irregular, rallying lacked the public interest of recent sessions.

Steel acquired increasing prominence with the progress of the ull season, advancing to 58¾. Other industrials, including American Can, also were strong, but the balance of the list was featureless.

Bonds were firm.

COTTON GOSSIP

Times-Picayune says: This is notice day in New York and the trade is naturally curious to know how tenders will be faced. One would hardly expect tenders of importance, as the prevailing premiums afford ample margin for carrying charges, but one never can tell, especially in New York. The real test will, of course, come when the premiums vanish or shrink below the cost of carrying the stuff. But the phrases of the new crop everybody everything else in most speculative minds. The torrential Texas rains should have started another boom, if the average operator could forget what Texas did last year—in spite of or because of excessive rains—in the first half of the season. But it is generally believed that the excessive rains enabled the big state to pull through the subsequent heat and drouth, thus making the crop a larger one instead of a failure. Yet the trade would look askance at a wet May in Texas or elsewhere, for a wet May has commonly been quite as disastrous as a premature freeze. From the technical point of view, a good deal will depend upon the spirit in which spot holders act. If slump in futures kill the demand which has hitherto arisen from the selling of hedges, the bulge bolsters up the market. Taken all around the rings, whereas the rings will hang up the auction flag if spot holders care the signal. This is a pure problem in psychology, but few psychologists can imagine a party of unlucky weather is predicted, cotton goods market steady, demand fair, and hope, although business is rather less active than recently. Special request to the Journal of Commerce indicate cotton acreage is being reduced in Texas, Oklahoma and Tennessee. Estimates of decrease range from 10 to 50 per cent; Oklahoma 10 to 20 per cent. Today is first notice day in May deliveries, liquidation of which might cause a slight recession on which we would buy cotton freely. Atlantic, cloudy rest of belt, no rain in Texas except at Galveston. Some rain in Arkansas and North Louisiana.

Traders ignoring weather conditions, but unless rains cease in southwest and Texas, as soon broken in eastern belt, there will be another bear movement. Think will not get under 10 cents on May notices; if so, prices should be higher on July and October.

Following from Little Rock: "Acreage reduction 20 per cent. Planting very much backward. Spots strong, bringing 9¾c readily. Big spot sales in Memphis yesterday."

To-day, no bids in New Orleans were as follows: May, 10.10; July, 10.37; October, 10.72; January, 10.67.

10 a. m. bids in New Orleans were: July, 10.16; October, 10.41; January, 10.67.

New York message says:

"Rumors were circulated attributed to unfavorable news from battlie in Flanders."

Washington Post says: "South Atlantic and east gulf states generally fair with seasonable temperatures. Temperature average are probable during coming week. West gulf states promise to be generally fair and seasonable."

Temple Gwathmey personally good seller of September. Wadsworth Howland, Wall street also been heavy sellers.

Wheat Closed 1 3-4 to 2 3-4c Down—Corn and Oats Off, Provisions Firm

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, April 27.—Nearly perfect conditions for domestic crops more than offset to-day's strong wheat cables from Liverpool. Opening prices 1¢ off to 1¢ up, were followed by a decided setback.

Foreign demand was large in consequence, and wheat closed nervous 1¾@2¾c under last night.

Corn gave way under general selling after opening at 1¢ decline to 1¢ advance.

Commission houses took to the bear side of the oats market.

Firmness in hogs lifted provisions.

HOTELS OF ATLANTA TESTED TO CAPACITY

Hundreds of Visitors to Grand Opera Arrived in the City Tuesday

Hotels of Atlanta were tested to their capacity Tuesday in accommodating the hundreds of visitors who arrived for the opera. Reservations were made in advance by many and these found themselves fortunate, for many persons were refused accommodations beyond Tuesday night.

Many of the members of the Metropolitan Opera company who were not needed in the first performance Monday night arrived Tuesday morning and afternoon. Among these are Rita Fornia, Lenora Sparkes, Madame Bori and their accompanying parties.

Visitors from Pennsylvania, Illinois, New York and Missouri, and from every southern state were registered at the hotels as arrivals Tuesday morning or late Monday. Most of these had reserved their accommodations for the entire week.

SENATOR LUKE LEA IS VISITOR IN ATLANTA

Prominent Tennessean Is Here With Mrs. Lea Attending Grand Opera

Senator Luke Lea, of Tennessee, called "the boy senator" by reason of the fact that when he entered the United States senate a few years ago he was the youngest member of that body, is in Atlanta with Mrs. Lea attending grand opera.

Senator Lea's family is one of the oldest in Tennessee, settling there soon after the Revolutionary war. They have been prominent in the affairs of the state from generation to generation and Senator Lea comes by his liking for politics naturally. He owns the Nashville Tennessean of Nashville, a leading paper of the state, and is one of the leaders of the Democratic party in Tennessee.

Senator Lea has been an able and consistent supporter of President Wilson in the senate and has attained prominence by the progressive part he has taken in various important national affairs.

Senator and Mrs. Lea will be in Atlanta several days.

(Philadelphia Public Ledger.)

"Pop, what do Mr. Blinks and Mr. Jones and Mr. Plunk mean when they talk about the 'H. P.' of their autos?"

"Mr. Blinks means 'high priced;' Mr. Jones 'hit people,' and Mr. Plunk, 'half paid for.'"
